Introduction

The Base Ball season of 1920 always will be known as a "Year of New Records." They were created in batting, in pitching and in fielding. The only position on the diamond which seemed to be exempt from the demonstration of a record of some description was that of the catcher. He assisted, however, in the making of records in other positions by steadfast and reliable service behind the bat. Ruth, of the New York American League club, excels, of course, with his wonderful and unexpected series of home run hits. Pratt, of the same team, made a most admirable showing on the field. The record-making epoch extended to the world series, in which Wambsganss, the Cleveland second baseman, for the first time in the great post-season meeting, made a triple play unassisted.

So much took place on the Base Ball field out of the ordinary that the publishers of SPALDING'S OFFICIAL BASE BALL RECORD cannot help but call attention to the fact of the more than ordinary value of this year's annual. While doing so, it seems proper again to reiterate the great and increasing worth of the RECORD as a compendium of the minutest details of Base Ball history on the playing field. A complete set of volumes of the SPALDING'S OFFICIAL BASE BALL RECORD, which it is almost impossible to obtain, is of the utmost importance to those who seek facts for information and comparison.

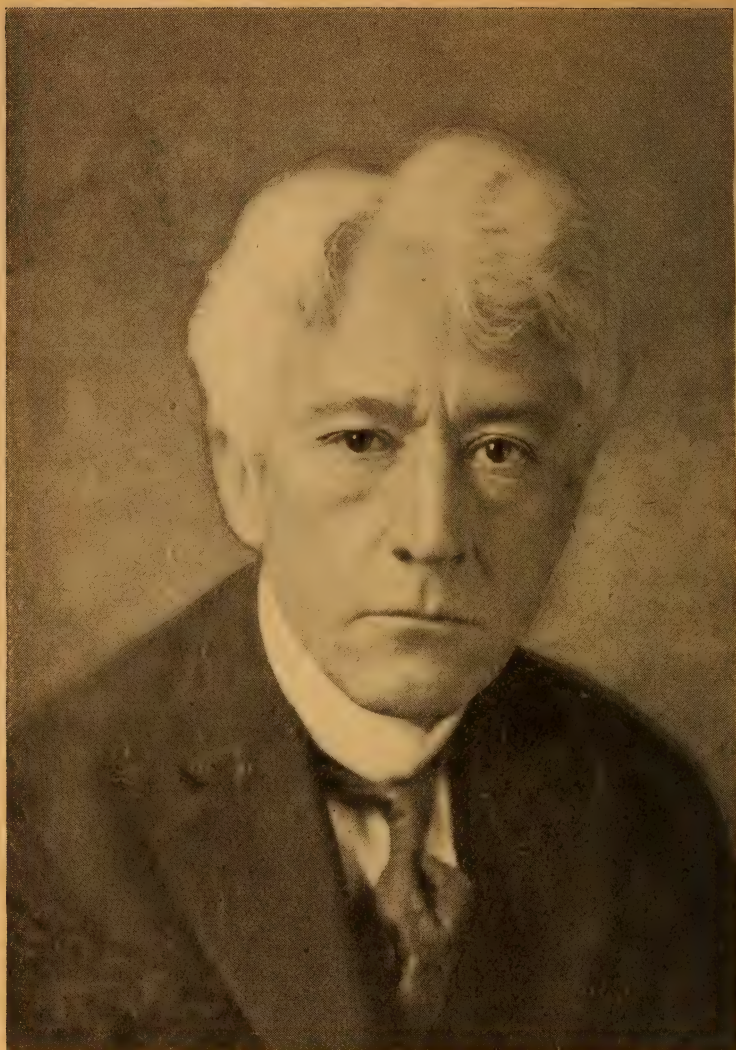

The "Red Book of Base Ball," or the "Little Red Book," as the Base Ball writers familiarly designate it, comprises more in smaller compass and terse condensation than any record volume that has been published concerning the national game. Year after year accuracy has been sought through constant research, and today more of the old doubtful records of Base Ball either have been corrected or, if they have been proved to be but hearsay, have been eliminated, than at any time in the history of the national game.

To establish one fact sometimes has taken weeks of digging into old newspaper files and correspondence with those who might shed further light on the subject—a task which has been willingly entered into that accuracy might be established. For their kind co-operation and cheerful assistance, the publishers are indebted to Messrs. E. J. Lanigan, Charles W. Mears, L. Gettelson, B. H. Swales and Al Munro Elias, who have courteously added to the verification and authentication of the records of the national game. Prior to this issue the publishers have called attention to the "worth while" of preserving each copy of the RECORD. Scores of requests are made annually for copies of the RECORD of earlier date. There are no copies to be had. Now and then, by the merest chance, one is released somewhere and snapped up greedily by a Base Ball enthusiast who lacks that volume as one toward completing his set.

Minor league records will be found much more voluminous this year than last, a healthy indication of returning popularity and success among the minor organizations.

PART I—RECORDS OF 1920

The Year in Base Ball

JANUARY.

- 6—George H. ("Babe") Ruth was transferred from Boston A. L. club to New York A. L. club for a sum said to have been $125,000.
- 8—August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission for sixteen years, sent in his resignation, to take effect not later than February 11.—Crane, infielder, transferred from Indianapolis to Cincinnati.
- 12—Milwaukee club sold by Clarence Rowland and others to new company.—Phil Douglas, New York N. L. pitcher, reinstated by National Commission.
- 13—Samuel Breadon elected president of St. Louis N. L. club.—Baird, New York N. L. released to Rochester, International League.
- 15—Thomas J. Hickey re-elected president American Association. An eighteen-player limit for each club was adopted.
- 20—Ed Walsh, former Chicago A. L. pitcher, made manager of Bridgeport, Conn.

FEBRUARY.

- 6—J. Carlisle Smith, Boston N. L., transferred to New York A. L.—Joe Wilhoit transferred by Boston A. L. to Toledo.—John Lapp, formerly catcher for Philadelphia A. L. club, died in Philadelphia.
- 7—An informal session of major and minor league Base Ball owners held at Chicago on proposed changes in governing rules.
- 9—A. H. Tearney re-elected president, secretary and treasurer of the I.-I.-I. League for five years. J. J. Cleary elected vice-president. Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Rock Island, Ill., given franchises, increasing the I.-I.-I. circuit to eight cities.—American Association agreed upon a 168-game schedule.—Joint rules committee of the major leagues met at Chicago and made several changes in the playing code affecting batting plays, base-running and scoring.
- 10—National and American leagues held annual schedule meetings at Chicago.—Announcement made that the controversy in the American League between club owners in New York, Boston and Chicago, on the one hand, and the remaining clubs of the circuit on the other, had been adjusted. New York was given third place in the championship race of 1919. Pitcher Mays was reinstated.—St. Louis N. L. obtained Fournier, first baseman, from Los Angeles.
- 11—Major leagues increased admission prices to fifty cents for bleachers, seventy-five cents for pavilion and one dollar for grandstand, war tax added.—Joint meeting of major leagues held at Chicago and names submitted as candidates for chairman of National Commission.—August Herrmann presented with engraved resolutions commending his able administration while chairman of the National Commission.—Charles O'Leary signed as coach for New York A. L. club.
- 12—Minor and major league members held an informal meeting at Chicago to discuss a future working agreement.—Mack Wheat transferred by Brooklyn to Philadelphia N. L.
- 13—Major and minor leagues at Chicago joint meeting decided to continue working under the "gentlemen's agreement" of 1919, except that a board of arbitration to settle all disputes would be appointed, this board to be made up of the chairman of the National Commission and one representative from the minor leagues, with a third as referee; in case of deadlock, the referee not to be connected with any Base Ball organization.
- 14—Scott Perry, former pitcher for Philadelphia A. L., reinstated by National Commission without penalty but with warning not to violate his contract again.
- 18—At the schedule meeting of the International League, New York City, it was decided to play 154 games, raise the league waiver price from $500 to $1,000, and not increase admission prices.

MARCH.

- 19—Franchise of the Providence club, Eastern League, transferred to Michael Hawkins and Charles Hilton, Albany, N. Y. Springfield (Mass.) franchise transferred to Arthur J. Shean, and Waterbury franchise to Charles A. Templeton.—Joe O'Neill, Chicago American League club traveling secretary, died in Chicago.—Armando Marsans transferred to Boston A. L. club.

APRIL.

- 3—Yale made one hit against Taylor, pitcher for Virginia, losing, 3-0.—Nav, defeated Princeton, 6-5, in eleven innings. Oddly enough, Boston defeated Army 6-5, although in nine innings.—Matthew McIntyre, outfielder for Philadelphia Chicago and Detroit A. L. and manager for Mobile, died in Detroit. He was born in Stonington, Conn.
- 4—Aaron S. Stern, former president of Cincinnati American Association club, died in Cincinnati, aged 67. The Cincinnati club was taken by him into the National League in 1890 and sold by him to A. L. Johnson.
- 7—Terry transferred from Pittsburgh to Chicago N. L. club.—Peoria, Ill., voted bonds for a city owned stadium on which its Base Ball team might play.
- 8—Ruth reported to have batted a ball 600 feet at Winston-Salem, N. C., for a home run. This included roll of ball.
- 10—Leon Ames unconditionally released by St. Louis N. L. He began his major league career with New York N. L. in 1903 and played with New York, Cincinnati and St. Louis in the National League.—Fourteen runs were scored in the first two innings of the Yale-Wesleyan game.—New York University scored seven runs in first inning against West Point and the latter six against New York University. The final score was 14-11 in favor of New York University.
- 11—Herbert Thormahlen, pitcher for New York A. L., announced his marriage to Miss Helen Anthony of West Hoboken.
- 12—Eastern League adopted a 140-game schedule.
- 14—Boston defeated New York N. L. on opening day, 6-3. Barnes lost for the Giants. Hubbell, Winters and Ryan also pitched for New York, and Eayrs and McQuillan for Boston.—Brooklyn defeated Philadelphia N. L., 9-2; Cadore pitched against Rixey.—Cincinnati defeated Chicago, 7-3; Ruether pitched against Alexander.—Pittsburgh defeated St. Louis N. L., 5-4, ten innings. Adams and Hamilton pitched for Pittsburgh against Doak, Tuero, May, Haines and Goodwin.—Philadelphia A. L. defeated New York, 3-1; Perry pitched against Shawkey. Philadelphia won when Ruth dropped a fly in the eighth on which two runs scored.—Cleveland defeated St. Louis A. L., 5-0; Coveleskie pitched against Sothoron.—Chicago A. L. defeated Detroit, 3-2, in eleven innings. Pipp made first home run in the American League and Roush first home run in the National League.—Perkins tied the score for the Athletics against New York by a home run and Heilman tied the score for Detroit against Chicago by a home run.
- 15—In the seventh inning Toney, New York N. L., struck out the side, yet Boston scored the winning and only run of the game on a hit by Cruise, McCarty's wild throw and a hit by Mann.—Vaughn, Chicago N. L., was hit safely four times. Chicago losing to Cincinnati, 4-3.—Season opened at Boston in American League. Washington losing, 7-5, five runs being made off Johnson in first two innings.—Philadelphia A. L. used sixteen players, but failed to defeat New York.—Brooklyn used seventeen players against Philadelphia N. L. and lost, making six runs in the eighth on seven hits, including a two-bagger, a sacrifice, a wild pitch and a hit batter, all by Smith, Philadelphia pitcher.
- 16—John Ashley Highlands, one of the most famous of Harvard pitchers, died suddenly in New York City.—Schang and Vitt suspended by Boston A. L. for failure to report.—Colgate scored 16 runs in fifth inning against the New York "Aggies."
- 17—Boston A. L. defeated Washington in fourteenth inning. Hooper scored Foster with a single after two were out.—Pipp's first four hits of the year were a single, double, triple and home run.—H. H. Frazee, owner Boston A. L. club, announced that Schang would be enjoined from playing Base Ball with any other team.—Cincinnati won local Chicago series.
- 18—Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati, 2-1, and scored both runs in first inning.—St. Louis N. L. defeated Chicago, 2-0, making both runs against Alexander in sixth.—Krause, Oakland, Cal., was batted for ten singles and nine runs in first inning by San Francisco.
- 19—Love transferred from Detroit to San Francisco.—Gharrity, Washington, doubled with bases filled against Perry, Philadelphia A. L., winning game.—Chicago N. L. defeated St. Louis in twelfth, Vaughn's single and Flack's double scoring three runs. St. Louis again used sixteen players.—Boston A. L. won both morning and afternoon games from New York.—Harvard and Virginia played a nine-inning tie, 2-2, darkness ending game.
- 20—Cravath batted a home run into Polo Ground stand in eighth, defeating New York N. L., 3-0, two runners on bases, Benton pitching.—Chicago A. Glazner and Wisner, Pittsburgh; second game, Cincinnati 7, Pittsburgh 3, Brenton pitching for Cincinnati against Zinn, Pittsburgh; third game, six innings, Pittsburgh 6, Cincinnati 0; Morrison pitching for Pittsburgh against Napier, Cincinnati.
- 5—World series began at Brooklyn; scores elsewhere in record.—Baltimore-St. Paul series began at Baltimore.
- 6—Williamsport, Pa., won championship of Pennsylvania Railway system.—Ernie Johnson was transferred from Salt Lake City to Chicago A. L.
- 7—National League invited American League to a conference October 18, to reorganize Base Ball.
- 12—Marquard, Brooklyn N. L., was fined for ticket speculating in Cleveland.—World series ended at Cleveland with Cleveland, winner of five games out of seven, defeating Brooklyn four times in succession, after winning first game and losing next two to Brooklyn.
- 14—Vernon won championship of Pacific Coast League.
- 15—Hugh Jennings resigned as manager of Detroit.

- 16—Baltimore, International League, won the post-season series with St. Paul, American Association.—New York N. L. played an eleven-inning tie with Almendares, at Havana, 3—3, Barnes pitching against Palmero.
- 18—All National League clubs and Chicago, New York and Boston of the American League adopted resolutions at a Chicago conference for a reorganization of Base Ball. Other American League clubs did not attend conference.—Almendares defeated New York N. L., 7—4, at Havana.
- 23—New York N. L. defeated Havana, 2—0, at Havana, Perritt pitching against Acosta.
- 24—New York N. L. 7, Almendares 7, at Havana, Cuba; Ryan, Perritt and Kelly pitching against Palmero, Fabre and Hernandez.
- 25—New York N. L. defeated Havana, 3—2, at Havana, Ryan pitching against Acosta and Tuero.—Lefevre, New York N. L., was transferred to St. Louis N. L.
- 27—Brooklyn re-engaged Wilbert Robinson with a three-year contract.—John Everitt was appointed manager of the Chicago Nationals.
- 28—Ed Barrow, former manager Boston A. L., was appointed business manager New York A. L., and Miller Huggins, manager.—Old Kentucky Base Ball League was formed with Lexington, Maysville, Winchester, Ashland, Paducah, Owensboro, Henderson and Hopkinsville in circuit.
- 29—Hugh Jennings was engaged as coach of the New York N. L. team.—Indictments were issued in Chicago against Eddie Cicotte, Joe Jackson, Claude Williams, Fred McMullin, George Weaver, Oscar Felsch, Charles Risberg, Arnold Gandil, Hal Chase, Abe Attell, Joseph Sullivan and Rafael Brown. Indictments against Martin J. Carlin, F. C. Water and William Chellus for operating Base Ball pools were also issued.
- 31—New York N. L. 4, Havana 3, at Havana, "Babe" Ruth playing with the New York Giants.

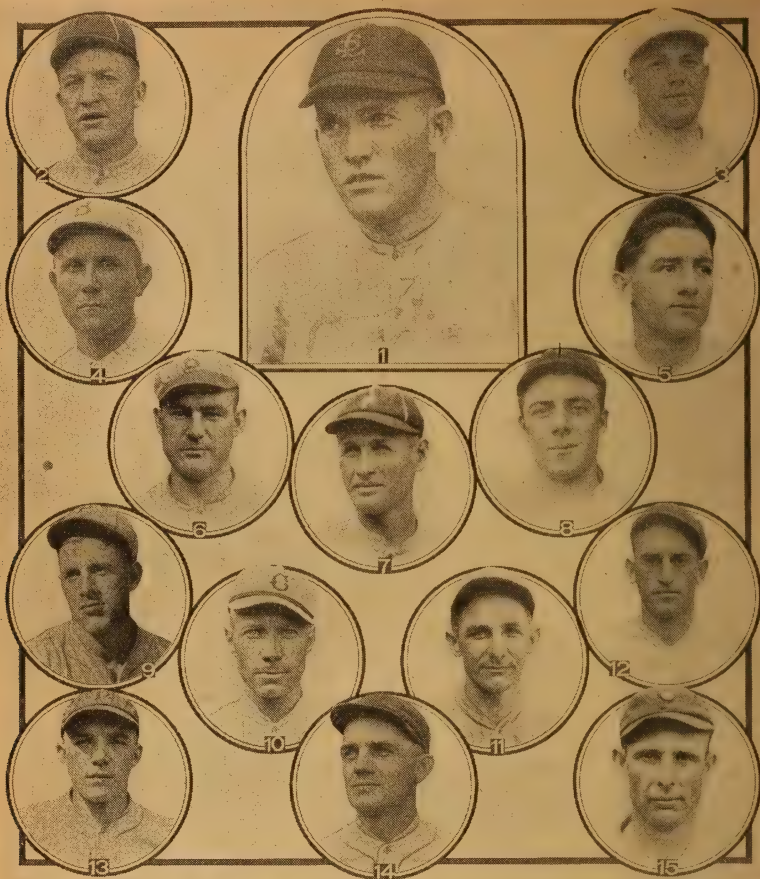

NOVEMBER.

- 4—Jimmy Burke, manager St. Louis A. L., was released.
- 5—Hugh Duffy was made manager of the Boston A. L. club.
- 6—George Stallings, manager of the Boston N. L. club, tendered his resignation.
- 7—The National League and Boston, New York and Chicago of the American League voted for a twelve-club league when the other five American League clubs refused to meet with them. Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis was named as the head of a Board of Control. A salary of $50,000 was attached to the office.
- 9—M. X. Sexton was elected president, John D. Martin, vice-president, and John H. Farrell, secretary, of the National Association at the annual meeting in Kansas City.
- 10—Conference was arranged in Chicago between the National League and the American League.—Joe Tinker disposed of his interest in the Columbus (Ohio) club.
- 11—Leslie Mann was transferred from Boston Nationals to St. Louis Nationals.—Otto Knabe was made manager of the Kansas City team.—Minor leagues ended session at Kansas City, to meet in 1921 at Buffalo. Thomas J. Hickey, J. Cal Ewing, David L. Fultz, A. R. Tearney, Dan O'Neill, John D. Martin, Robert Brown, George H. Maines, E. W. Dickerson, N. P. Cornish and W. R. Rose were made member of the National Board of Arbitration.—M. H. Sexton, Thomas J. Hickey, John D. Martin, George H. Maines, William Walsh and J. W. Morris were appointed a committee to meet with the major leagues to reorganize Base Ball administration.—Chicago Nationals obtained Ray Grimes from Bridgeport.
- 12—Judge Kenesaw M. Landis accepted the position as head of the new Base Ball board to control the national game for a period of seven years. It was agreed that he should retain his position on the bench.—Texas League was advanced from Class B to Class A.
- 16—Eugene McGann was made manager of Bridgeport.—Rapp, third baseman of St. Paul, was obtained by the New York Nationals.
- 18—Mitchell was transferred from Vernon, Cal., to New York A. L. club.—Ellison, Detroit, was transferred to San Francisco for Cole, pitcher.
- 19—Gedeon was unconditionally released by the St. Louis A. L. club.
- 20—M. J. Kelly declined offer to manage Philadelphia N. L. club because of previous contract.—Leon J. Cadore, Brooklyn pitcher, married Miss Helen J. Sweeney, Brooklyn.
- 22—Jacobs, pitcher, was transferred from St. Louis Nationals to Cincinnati.
- 30—Fred P. Mitchell was named as manager for the Boston N. L. club, to succeed George Stallings.

DECEMBER.

- 1—C. C. Cravath, former manager of the Philadelphia N. L. club, was appointed manager at Salt Lake City.—James Dunn, Cleveland, Thomas Shibe, Philadel-

- phia, and Frank J. Navin, Detroit, were named an American League committee to meet with the National League and Judge K. M. Landis to draw up a new national agreement for Base Ball.
- 4—Omaha club was sold to J. Fagan Burch of Houston, Tex., by W. A. Rourke.
- 6—The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia reversed a judgment of $264,000 given against organized Base Ball, so called, granted two years ago in a suit brought by the Baltimore club of the erstwhile Federal League. The court held that the reserve rule held restrictions referring only to the personnel of various clubs and did not affect the movements of any rival league in interstate commerce. In other words, that major league organization was not a trust in definition of that which would be objectionable under the anti-trust law.
- 7—Chicago fans gave a banquet to John Evers, newly appointed manager of the Cubs.
- 9—George Browne, former right fielder for New York N. L. and Boston N. L., died at Poughkeepsie.
- 10—William J. Donovan, former manager of the Jersey City club, was made manager of the Philadelphia Nationals.—Los Angeles County grand jury returned indictments against Borton, Vernon club; Maggert, Salt Lake City club; Rumler, Salt Lake City club, and Nathan Raymond, Seattle, charging conspiracy to throw ball games.
- 11—Meeting of delegates from the major and minor leagues, with Commissioner Landis presiding, was held in New York, at the Hotel Commodore, to consider a new national agreement. Representing the National League were August Herrmann, Barney Dreyfuss and Charles H. Ebbets. For the American League, James Dunn, Tom Shibe and Frank J. Navin. For the minor leagues, M. H. Sexton, George H. Maines, T. J. Hickey, J. Walter Morris, John D. Martin, W. H. Walsh, W. B. Bradley and Dan O'Neill. John A. Heydler was present, as were John Conway Toole and George Wharton Pepper.
- 13—John Conway Toole was elected president of the New International League to succeed David L. Fultz. The name of the league was changed to the National Association of Professional Base Ball Clubs. C. H. Knapp of the Baltimore club was originally elected to succeed Mr. Fultz, but declined to serve because the Baltimore club was opposed to the draft plan in Base Ball.
- 14—Having ascertained that the title, "National Association of Professional Base Ball Clubs" is copyrighted, the New International League returned to its old name.—Arthur Irwin was made manager of the Hartford club of the Eastern League.—Although the term of office of John A. Heydler, president of the National League, had another year to run, the league extended it three years beyond the original period voted upon. His salary was increased. It was agreed to permit registered spitball pitchers to continue using the spitball until the end of their major league careers. New national agreement was unanimously ratified. Brooklyn was awarded the pennant.
- 15—The New York A. L. club transferred Ruel, Thormahlen, Pratt and Vick to the Boston A. L. club in exchange for Hoyt, Harper, Schang and McNally.—Larry Doyle, formerly of the New York Giants, was appointed manager of the Toronto club.—Marquard was transferred to Cincinnati in exchange for Ruether.—Barney Dreyfuss was re-elected president of the Pittsburgh club.—I. E. Sanborn was elected president of the Base Ball Writers' Association; Fred G. Lieb, vice-president, and Joseph McCready, secretary and treasurer.
- 16—Jimmy Burke, formerly manager of the St. Louis A. L. club, was appointed coach of the Boston A. L. club.—P. J. Donovan was made manager of the Jersey City club.
- 17—Thomas J. Hickey, president American Association, announced unwillingness of his organization to subscribe to new national agreement for twenty-five years unless it had voice in the selection of the successor to Judge K. M. Landis at the expiration of his term.—American League at annual meeting in New York elected new Board of Directors. Jacob Ruppert, who was chosen, resigned because rotation in office to the Chicago and Boston clubs was ignored, and Tom Shibe, Philadelphia, was elected in his place.
- 18—Ty Cobb signed a contract to manage the Detroit club in 1921.—William J. Clymer was made manager of the Toledo club.
- 20—John D. Martin was re-elected president of the Southern Association for three years and approval given to an annual post-season series between the Southern Association and the Texas League.
- 21—Joe Birmingham was appointed manager of the Albany club.—Southern Association decided on 154-game schedule beginning April 13.
- 24—Conspiring to throw ball games was held not to be a criminal offense in California by Judge Frank R. Willis, who dismissed indictments against Borton, Rumler, Maggert and Raymond.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLAYERS IN THE SPALDING BASE BALL
HALL OF FAME.

The Spalding Base Ball Hall of Fame

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Among the players of 1920 in the National League Hall of Fame there are so many new faces that the change from 1919 amounts almost to a clean sweep. Only six of those who were supreme in 1919 have found a niche for themselves in 1920. These are Alexander of Chicago, Myers of Brooklyn, Burns of New York, Deal and Terry of Chicago, and Southworth of Pittsburgh. It is not because the younger players have supplanted the older, more than it is that the older players found their way back to the top in the season of 1920.

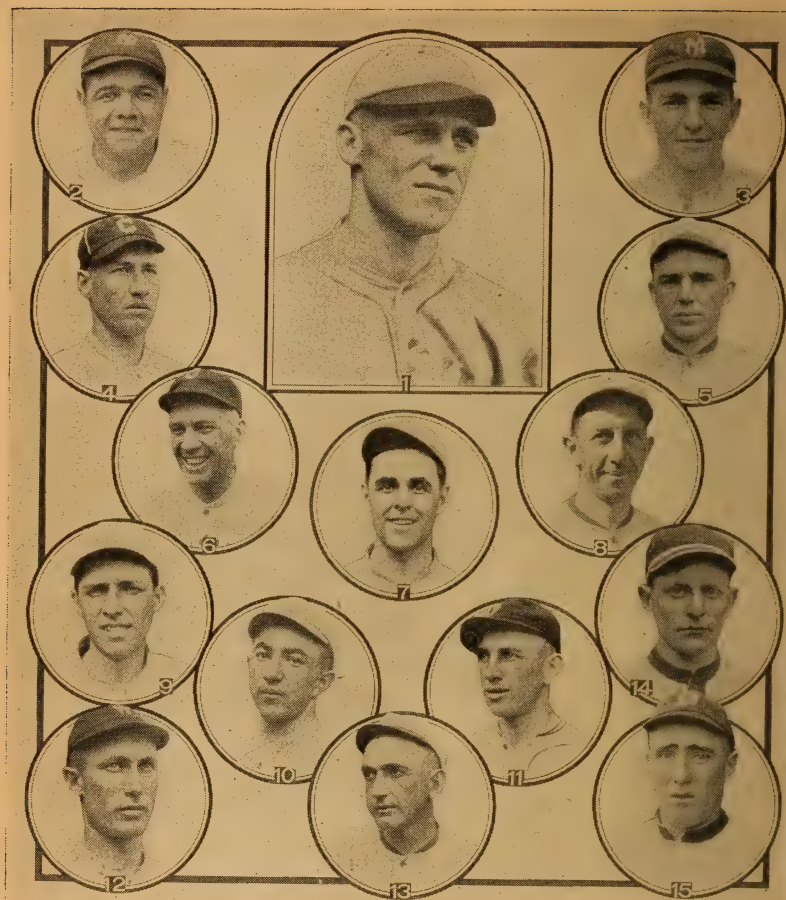

Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis established himself as leader of the batters without question. There was no one who stood above him among the players who took part in more than fifteen games. He played in 149 contests and made in all 218 hits. Of these, 145 were singles, 44 were two-baggers, 20 were three-base hits, and nine were home runs. That gave Hornsby three records—one for the largest number of all kinds of hits, a second for the most two-base hits, and, best of all, of course, the highest percentage in batting, .370. There have been several batsmen in the past in the National League who have surpassed these figures, and of these Maul of Philadelphia, for instance, with a record of .450 in 1887, took part in only sixteen games. Hugh Duffy is the real National League leader, with his batting average of .438 in 1894. Hornsby's average of .370 is 49 points better than was made by Roush of Cincinnati in 1919, with .321.

The player who made the most singles in the National League in 1920 was Milton J. Stock of St. Louis, now in service long enough to be considered a veteran. His total number of hits was 204, of which 28 were two-baggers and six were three-base hits. He did not make a home run. His total number of singles was 170. The leading three-base hitter of the league is Harry Myers of Brooklyn, with 22 three-baggers. In 1919 he was tied with Southworth of Pittsburgh, each player having a total of 19. It will be noted in all of the 1920 batting records that the players hit the ball more freely than they did in 1919, which is conclusive enough evidence that there was an increase of batting in the National League, as well as in the American League, even if it was not so great. Even Fred Williams of Philadelphia, who leads in home runs with 15, did better than Cravath of the same team in 1919, although Williams played in many more games than Cravath, and his average per game would be lower for that reason. Cravath made 12 home runs in fewer games. The best sacrifice hitter in the National League was George Cutshaw of Pittsburgh, a new honor for him to acquire. In 1919 he was the leading second baseman.

In the base-running department of the game, Max Carey recaptured his prominence as the leader in stolen bases, with a total of 52, while George Burns of New York scored the greatest number of runs, 115, the same distinction which he earned in the year previous.

In fielding there is a new leader at first base, one of the younger generation of ball players. Charles Grimm, the young first baseman of Pittsburgh, who accepted fewer chances than Kelly of New York, led the first basemen. Both young players made an admirable record, and Grimm's showing surprised those who had failed to watch him closely. The leading second baseman in 1920 was Morris Rath of Cincinnati. He gave Cutshaw a hard fight in 1919 and just lost out. In 1920 he led Cutshaw by nine points. Cutshaw was beaten by four players who took part in more than fifty games. A total of fifty games is accepted as a fair standard on which to make and compare records.

There are two infielders in 1920 who have held their own with the good mark that they established in 1919. These are Zeb Terry and Charles Deal of Chicago. In 1919 Terry was the Hall of Fame shortstop, and he has earned his title again, while Deal, his companion on the infield, who was the leading third baseman in 1919, is once more the leading third baseman in 1920, with a capital average of .973 in 128 games. Groh of Cincinnati was second with .969, still fighting for the lead which he held in 1918, but not quite able to attain it, and Frisch of New York, a newcomer into the ranks of third basemen, was third, with an average of .967 in 109 games.

In the outfield, William Southworth of Pittsburgh ran ahead of Carey of the same team, and surpassed Burns of New York. The latter gave Southworth a fine race. It is of no little interest to call attention to the similarity of the records which were made by Burns in 1919 and by Southworth in 1920. In 1919 Burns, in 139 games, had 290 putouts, fifteen assists, and three errors. In 1920, in 142 games, Southworth had 337 putouts—quite a margin in excess—12 assists, which was not so good as Burns in 1919, and exactly the same number of errors—three. Second to Southworth in 1920 was Neale of Cincinnati, who came on astonishingly well, and Burns was a very close third. It was a capital race among the trio all of the year.

The leading catcher of 1920 was Otto Miller of Brooklyn. An analysis of his record shows what difference a strikeout corps of pitchers can make with the record of the player behind the bat. Miller took part in 89 games and had 418 putouts. Dropping down the list of catchers, it is found that Clemmons of St. Louis, who played in 103 games, had ten less putouts than Miller, although he took part in fourteen more games. There is another fact of interest. Miller in his 89 games made 65 assists, yet George O'Neil, the young catcher of Boston, in 105 games made 153 assists, leading the leagues by a wide margin in that respect, as his nearest competitor, Wingo of Cincinnati, had 115 assists in 107 games. It would appear that not only were the Brooklyn pitchers good strikeout pitchers, but were also proficient in keeping the runners hugging first base. Miller made only seven errors, and his accuracy in handling the ball is attested by that small number.

Grover Alexander of Chicago again leads the pitchers on the basis of earned runs per game, the most exacting test of all as to the individual ability of a pitcher. So well are these averages developed and ascertained that they tell the true value of a pitcher as against any other medium which has been devised. On the basis of percentage of games won and lost, Grimes of Brooklyn is the leading pitcher; but the games which are won are won by co-operation, and the games which are lost are often lost by another than the pitcher, so nothing is to be ascertained from those figures as to the individual skill of the man who throws the ball from the pitcher's plate.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

In 1919 the "fans" could have been forgiven for believing that the maximum of great things in the American League, or any major league, had been achieved for a time when "Babe" Ruth established his record of twenty-nine home runs. But they didn't know "Babe," nor did any one, possibly not even "Babe" himself, that fine humored creature of sinew, physical strength, clear vision and good will to his fellow men.

In 1920 he self-perpetrated an earthquake shock that tumbled all batting records from their foundation by making fifty-four home runs. Had he been able to play in all the scheduled games of the American League, and had the American League pitchers been more confident of matching their skill against his and not given him so many bases on balls, he would have made more home runs. Fifty-four, however, is such an overwhelming display of mastery over the batters of all time that it is not for any one to be hypercritical of the pitchers.

There are 154 games in the regular schedule of the American League. Ruth batted at a percentage of very nearly half a home run per game in the games in which he took part. Had he participated in all of the 154 games and continued his successful average, his total number of home runs would have been approximately sixty-five—three or four more, if anything. Had his percentage been equal to exactly one-half of a home run per game he would have had a total of seventy-seven home runs in the 154 games of the schedule. These figures are cited to give an idea of the extraordinary nature of his triumph. The work of all batters in all the history of Base Ball was buried under the avalanche of home runs which this big boy lined out in 1920.

His greatest qualification, and that in which he excels any batter in the history of Base Ball, is the manner in which he "centers" the ball. To "center" the ball is to meet it squarely with the greatest amount of bat surface countering against the greatest amount of ball surface. Eyesight does this just as eyesight helps to make the good rifle shot. The editor of the RECORD has been of opinion for some years that in the final analysis of superior batting it would be found that batters are good, or better, to a great degree, as their eyesight is good or better. There are other adjuncts to batting than eyesight, but, all other things being equal, the man with the better vision will be the better batter. Ruth also made the most runs, 158, of which he "manufactured in person" his 54.

The best pitcher in the American League, by the record of earned runs, was Robert Shawkey of the New York club, a right-hander with control and speed. The best pitcher, judged by percentage of games won and lost, was James Bagby of Cleveland, a right-hander with control and confidence, a pitcher of the type who makes the batter hit.

The best individual achievement of any player in the American League was that of George Sisler of the St. Louis club who finally came into his own most emphatically. He deserved it, as he is unquestionably one of the best ball players of the generation. He was the leading batsman, with a percentage of .407, a rare achievement of itself, for there are very few .400 batters in these days; he made the most single base hits, a total of 171, and the greatest number of hits, 257. His total of 257 made a new record for his league, as he excelled that which had been held by Ty Cobb, 248. These are not records of one-base hits, but of all hits made during a season.

Tris Speaker, manager and center fielder of the Cleveland club, made the most two-base hits, an even fifty. The most three-base hits were made by Joe Jackson of Chicago, who had twenty.

Joe Gedeon of St. Louis and Owen Bush of Detroit were tied as league leaders in sacrifice hits. The total of each was 48. Chapman of the Cleveland club had made 41 up to the time of his death, and there was a good chance that he would have held the record for sacrifice hits as he did in 1919.

There is an entirely new leader in stolen bases, Edgar Rice of Washington. Eddie Collins held the record the previous year, but he was easily led by Rice in 1920.

In the fielding positions the Hall of Fame is hung with the faces of veterans. Ray Schalk of Chicago, by some considered to be one of the best catchers in Base Ball history, led the catchers, with a rare percentage of .986. The leading first baseman was John McInnis of Boston, with .996. Eddie Collins of Chicago was the top-notch second baseman, closely pursued by Pratt of the New York club, who surpassed Collins in acceptances of many chances in a single game. Pratt equaled the American League record by accepting 16 chances in one game. Oscar Vitt of Boston in 64 games made a record of .986, which is a splendid mark for a third baseman. It is true that Gardner of Cleveland in 154 games had a fielding percentage of .976, which is very good, but fifty games have been established as a fair standard for a place in the Hall of Fame. Everett Scott of Boston, another veteran, with his .973 at shortstop, made a capital record for the infield. Charles Shorten of Detroit received the outfield choice, with a percentage of .989 in 99 games. The figure ".9" certainly played a conspicuous part in his work. Strunk, who finished the season with Chicago, fielded for .985 in 10 games, but Shorten earned his distinction with an almost 1000 record in 9 games.

For the first time in years Ty Cobb of the Detroit club found no place in the Hall of Fame. He was unable to play all of the season and did not establish the high mark which had made him a leader in other years. Ruth, Eddie Collins, Gedeon, Vitt and Scott were players of the Hall of Fame in 1919 who repeated their good work in 1920 and qualified for their membership in the Hall of Fame again.

Henry L. Sparrow

Henry L. Sparrow, business manager of the New York American League Base Ball club, died suddenly at his home in New York City, May 7, 1920. He was born at Orange, N. J., in 1875. In his boyhood days he played both Base Ball and foot ball with the Orange Field Club. He became the business manager of the New York club in 1915, when that organization was purchased by Colonels Jacob Ruppert and T. L. Huston, and served ably and faithfully until he passed away so abruptly. On the very evening of his last departure from the club office he was in good spirits and walked through the door with a smile on his mouth. He carried on the business of the club through the war, which was a task in itself, and no man ever served more faithfully in any capacity.

Unaffected, with a disposition all sunshine, and with a carefree manner which was a screen for his real thoughtfulness, he made his way through the world. It was a pleasure to know him. He made the trip around the world with the teams which were taken by Messrs. McGraw and Comiskey, deciding at the very last moment to accompany the ball players, and before the trip had gone far he had become the business manager. Previous experience in the South on training trips with the Giants had given him an insight into the character of the work.

In 1917 he became very ill while returning from the South on a spring training trip of the New York American League club. While at Albany, Ga., he collapsed on the platform of the railroad station after dinner. He was taken to the hospital at once, but his recovery was slow. Acute indigestion, caused by the worries of his position, and the not always good opportunity to procure well-cooked food, was the cause of his breakdown. He never fully recovered. He declined to take a vacation, although repeatedly urged to do so, and his pluck in continuing work undoubtedly hastened his death. He wanted to see the club of which he was business manager have a good season, and, as he explained to the editor of the GUIDE, wished to "be in it as much as he could." Unfortunately he had not correctly measured the limit of his own endurance, even though he knew that his health was affected.

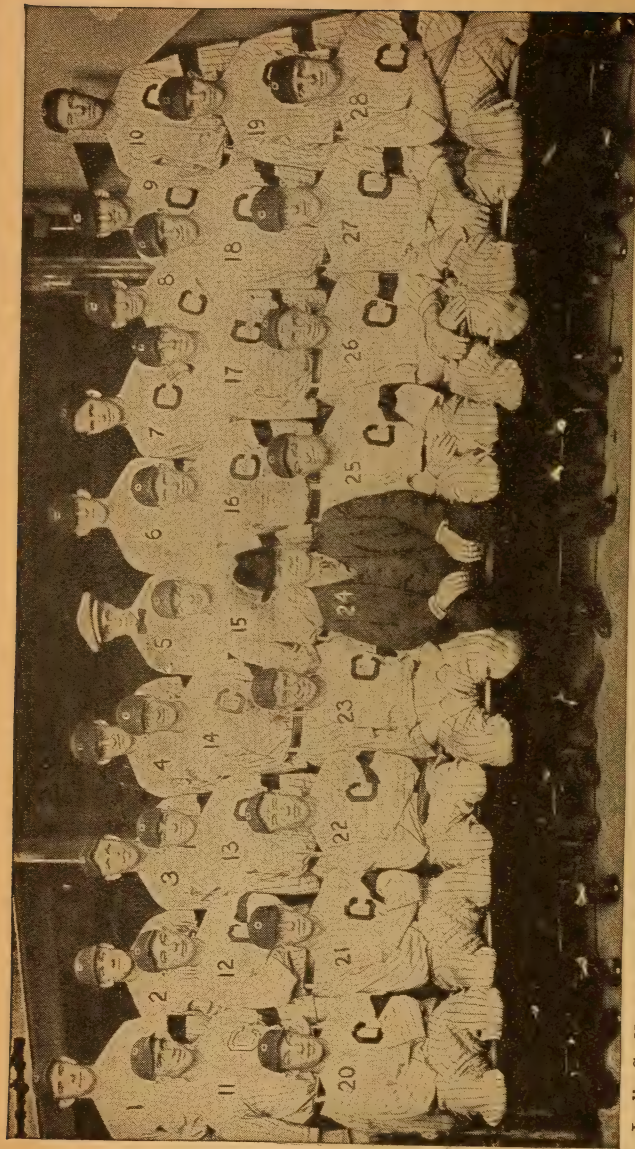

AARON S. STERN

Aaron S. Stern died at Cincinnati, Ohio, April 4, 1920. At one time Mr. Stern was principal owner of the Cincinnati Base Ball Club. He was more conspicuously identified with its interests when Cincinnati was a member of the American Association prior to 1890.

During the conflict of interests between organized Base Ball and the Brotherhood League, Cincinnati resigned from the American Association and joined the National League. Brooklyn took like action. From that time on Cincinnati became a storm center of attack in the West. The Brotherhood leaders felt that if Cincinnati could be wrested from the National League they would win in their fight for supremacy in Base Ball. Albert L. Johnson of the Brotherhood finally purchased the club, only to find that he had a useless property on his hands, as the Brotherhood went out of existence.

J. ED GRILLO

J. Ed Grillo died in Washington, D. C., May 27, 1920. Independent of thought and action, witty and sarcastic if he chose to be in his writings, he had served both as Base Ball official and Base Ball writer. He was president of the Western League at one time, a position which he gladly withdrew from owing to the difficulties which surrounded it. He conducted the Base Ball column of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune and also that of the Washington Star, and to both of them he lent an individuality and knowledge which made him one of the conspicuous Base Ball writers of his time.

Cleveland won the world series of 1920, to have been a series of nine games as in 1919, the team winning the first five to be declared victors, by defeating Brooklyn in the first game at Brooklyn, losing the next two at Brooklyn, and winning four straight at Cleveland. The predominant figure of the series was Coveleskie, pitcher for Cleveland, who won all three of the games which he pitched against the National League champions. Batting was light and runs a paucity. In three of the games the defeated team did not score and in the other four made but one run in each contest.

The most brilliant fielding performance of the series, a play, which had never taken place prior to 1920 in any world series, and one which is one of the most infrequent in Base Ball, was a triple play unassisted in the fifth game at Cleveland, Sunday, October 10, by Wambsganss, second baseman of the Cleveland club. With Kilduff on second and Miller on first, Mitchell being at bat, the latter rapped a hard line drive to the right of second base. Wambsganss leaped for the ball and caught it with one hand. He ran to second, touching the base, which retired Kilduff who was on his way to third, and as Miller was almost at second base when this took place. Wambsganss had but to advance a step or two up the line and touch him out. It was a timely play. Had the hit been safe Kilduff could easily have scored, Miller would have gone to third base, and Mitchell would have been on second base with no one out.

It was also in the fifth game, with three runners on bases and no one out in the first inning, that Smith, right fielder for Cleveland, batted the ball over the right field wall in Cleveland for a home run. The outfield fences at Cleveland were in general shorter than outfield fences where several world series have been played. All three of the batters who preceded Smith—they were Jamieson, Wambsganss and Speaker, the latter being favored by luck when Grimes fell down trying to reach his bunt—reached first on safe hits. Thus Smith earned four runs with one blow of the bat. The ball cleared the screen which extends above the fence and splintered the side of a grocery store across the street.

The third display of unusual Base Ball activity in this game was a home run made by Bagby in the fourth inning with two on bases. This would not have been a home run had not a temporary stand encroached on the field in right center. Myers very likely would have caught the ball.

It is a curious fact that in this game the Brooklyn players made thirteen hits against Bagby and scored but one run. Bagby was hit hard and savagely throughout and it was not a display of skill on his part which prevented Brooklyn from winning.

Tremendous enthusiasm warmed Cleveland until it was like a volcano orally and mentally. For years before ninety per cent of Cleveland's Base Ball enthusiasts had been born, Cleveland had been fighting for a championship. In its time it attested loyalty to some of the best Base Ball clubs in athletic history. When the championship realization came Cleveland was populated with a new generation. Not a man who had been attached as club owner in the past had a thing to do with the Cleveland club of the present. While the series was in progress in Cleveland regret was expressed more than once that an old home week had not been called for bringing together former owners, former players and former writers who had enlisted their efforts for Base Ball in Cleveland in the past.

The old Forest Citys of Cleveland, years gone back, as years are considered in professional Base Ball, which has not been of such wonderful longevity, in their day were one of the real teams of Base Ball.

The enthusiasm in Brooklyn was less vociferous. Brooklyn had championships before 1920, and then, too, there was no wild abandon on the part of Brooklyn rooters toward predicting victory for the Brooklyn team. It was regarded as an organization possessing fine pitchers, but Brooklyn was chary about imagining that fine pitchers could bring the team into a safe haven. As it proved, the team did have a fine corps of pitchers. Brooklyn lacked most in batters. The team did not bat hard enough to dent a world series. Nor did it run bases exceedingly well. Its infield was its strength, and Olson and Kilduff shine as the two big men on the infield, both teams included, for all the games played.

The attendance was up to capacity in both cities. Record crowds were not anticipated, as neither park had seating facilities for a record crowd.

In the 1921 edition of SPALDING'S OFFICIAL BASE BALL GUIDE the detailed play of the world series will be published. In this issue of the RECORD the scoring of runs in each contest will be described.

FIRST GAME—AT BROOKLYN, OCTOBER 5

For Brooklyn's pitcher Manager Robinson chose Marquard, a seasoned veteran who had participated in other world series games. He is a left hand pitcher, and inaugurating a world series with a left hand pitcher was an innovation in Base Ball. Coveleskie, a consistent winner for Cleveland and a spitball pitcher, was chosen by Manager Speaker.

Each team made five hits, but those of the Cleveland players were the more timely. The catch of a speedy, twisting line drive batted by Krueger first batter up in the eighth inning for Brooklyn, unquestionably prevented a Brooklyn rally at the bat, and the team was left scoreless at a moment when a run or two might have changed the tide or prolonged the game.

Cleveland scored in the second inning. Burns, the first batter, lifted a high fly in the general direction of short right center field. A gale was blowing from the northwest and the ball drifted toward second base. Griffith had run in for it and so had Myers. Kilduff was set beneath it, but the ball carried over his head and fell to the ground in front of Konetchy, who made a futile grab for it. Konetchy picked up the ball and threw hurriedly toward second base, for which Burns was running. Olson had forgotten to cover second base and the ball went to the left field fence, Burns scoring at will. Gardner was thrown out by Olson. Wood was given a base on balls. Sewell batted safely to right field and O'Neill followed with a long two bagger just inside the third base foul line, scoring Wood.

In the fourth inning, with Gardner out, Wood batted a line drive that hit the center field fence. It was good for two bases. Sewell flied to Myers in center. Again O'Neill came to bat, and this time met the ball—a low outside curve—with the end of his bat and hit safely to right field for two bases, scoring Wood. That was Cleveland's last run of the game, but the first two would have been enough.

Brooklyn's only run was made in the seventh inning. Wheat, the first batter, rapped the ball to right field for two bases. Myers was thrown out by Sewell, Wheat going to third. Konetchy batted the ball toward first base. It was impossible to retire Wheat, who scored, but Coveleskie threw the batter out at first.

Brooklyn had an opportunity in the fourth. Olson singled at the start, but was forced out by J. Johnston. Griffith batted safely to center. With two runners on bases, Wheat and Myers were retired on fly catches by Evans and Wood. In the eighth, after Speaker had unquestionably killed a three-base hit for Krueger, Mitchell, batting for Mamaux, singled to right field. Olson was given a base on balls. Griffith hit hard to right field, but Wambs-ganss scooped the ball at top speed and threw to Sewell at second, forcing Olson out.

Cleveland went out in one, two, three order for nine innings, except in the two innings in which runs were scored, and in the third inning when Evans began with a base on balls, reached second on a sacrifice, and after Speaker had popped out, was run down by Jimmy Johnston and retired at second. The score of the game follows:

SECOND GAME—AT BROOKLYN, OCTOBER 6

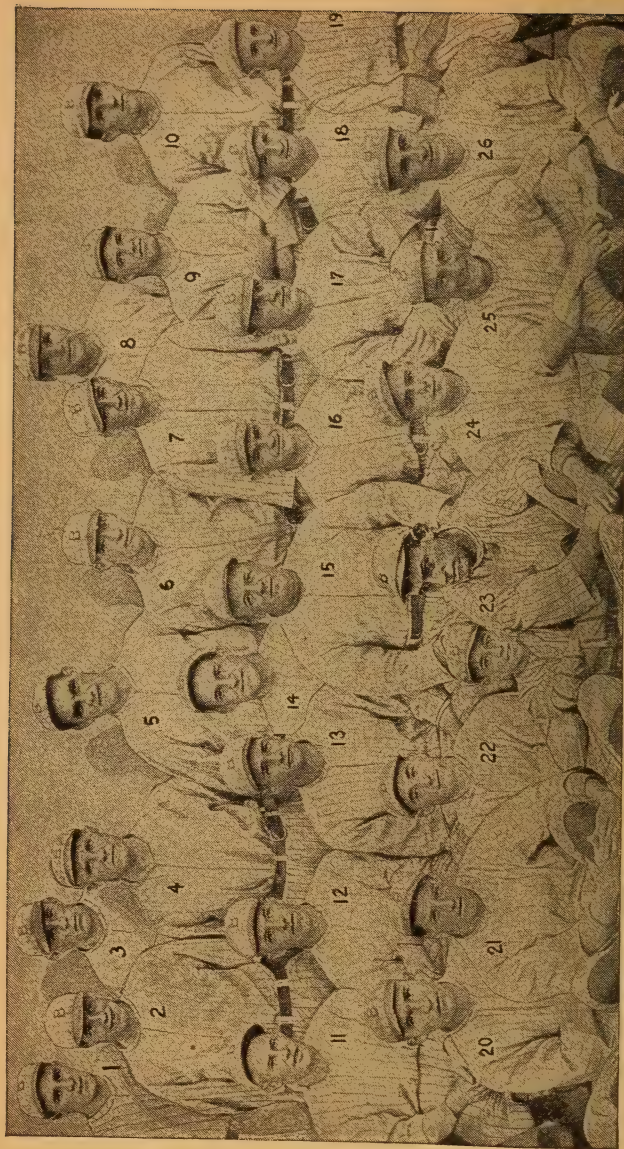

In the second game the leading pitchers of each major league for the season of 1920 were pitted against one another. Grimes, the famous spitball pitcher of Brooklyn, was opposed by Bagby, who had been Cleveland's standby during the season.

While Grimes did not pitch an extraordinary game, in that he kept base hits to two or three, he did pitch a game in which Cleveland did not score, although not for lack of opportunity. In the eighth inning, for instance, Grimes gave three bases on balls, yet no run was made by the American League champions.

Bagby was not batted freely, but he was batted effectively. Brooklyn could find his curves when there were runners on the bases. It was another small scoring contest, the figure "3" again making itself manifest, as that was Brooklyn's total of runs.

With one out in the first inning J. Johnston hit safely to left field and stole second base. Griffith was thrown out at first by W. Johnston, Cleveland's first baseman, to Bagby. Wheat batted to center field for two bases, scoring J. Johnston. Wheat made a two-bagger out of the hit by taking a desperate chance to go to second. It seemed as if he caught the Cleveland outfielders napping.

In the third inning Grimes, the first man up, batted safely to center field. Olson bunted and Bagby threw poorly to second base, both Grimes and Olson being safe. J. Johnston popped feebly to O'Neill. Griffith came through with a hot two-bagger which caromed off Wambsganss' glove toward right field, scoring Grimes. Olson went to third and Griffith to second. Wheat was purposely given a base on balls. With the bases filled, Myers hit to Gardner and Olson was thrown out at the plate. O'Neill relayed the ball to first for a double play, but it hit Myers in the back. Griffith was trying to score, but W. Johnston recovered the ball in time to throw the runner out at the plate. Manager Robinson protested that O'Neill had blocked the plate before he had the ball in his possession, but the protest was not allowed.

In the fifth inning, with one out, Olson batted safely to center field. W. Johnston threw his brother, J. Johnston, out at first base. Griffith batted a clean single to center and Olson scored the last run of the game.

Brooklyn took advantage of its best scoring opportunities to make runs. In the innings in which no runs were made the Brooklyns never were dangerous on the bases. Cleveland missed out in the second inning when Gardner began with a two-bagger and died when Grimes caught him off second on W. Johnston's weak hit. In the fourth, Speaker, the first batter, received a base on balls, went to second on a sacrifice, and remained there. In the seventh, Gardner began with a single to center, was forced out. Sewell flied out, O'Neill scratched a single, and Bagby struck out. In the eighth, Grimes gave bases on balls in succession to Jamieson and Burns, the latter batting for Wambsganss. Speaker was thrown out at first by Kilduff and Smith fouled to Miller. Gardner was given a base on balls, filling the bases, but was forced at second by W. Johnston. The score of the game follows:

THIRD GAME—AT BROOKLYN, OCTOBER 7

Cleveland was powerless against Sherrod Smith, Brooklyn's left-hander, in the third game, and should not have scored. The result was quickly settled. In the first inning, with Caldwell in the box, Brooklyn scored two runs. Caldwell was taken out before the inning was completed and that was his sole appearance in the world series. Mails was substituted and pitched until after the finish of the seventh inning, when a substitute batter took his place.

A disastrous fumble of a simple play by Sewell gave Brooklyn a chance to strike hard at the beginning, but after the first inning the Brooklyn players were quite as ineffective with the bat as their rivals, who could do nothing with Smith.

Brooklyn's first batter was Olson, who was given a base on balls. J. Johnston sacrificed and Olson went to second. Griffith hit squarely to Sewell, who played the ball badly, and Olson was safe at third and Griffith at first. Wheat batted a stinging single between Gardner and Sewell, and Olson scored. Myers hit toward right field and Burns, playing first, partially checked the ball, but could not prevent Griffith from scoring. Manager Speaker walked in from the outfield and put Mails in the box in place of Caldwell. Konetchy popped to Wambsganss and Kilduff fouled to right field.

In the fourth inning Speaker drove a low liner to left field. Wheat was on top of the ball, but permitted it to get through him, and Speaker raced around the bases. It was officially a two-base hit, as Wheat should have blocked the ball. In the second, fourth and seventh innings Brooklyn began by having the first batter reach first base safely on balls. Sharp field work, combined with good pitching, prevented scoring. Cleveland did not get the first batter in any inning safely on first, and the chances of the American League champions were practically nil throughout the game. The score follows:

FOURTH GAME—AT CLEVELAND, OCTOBER 9

After a lapse of one day in travel, the series was resumed at Cleveland. It also finished at Cleveland. Brooklyn did not play as well by some margin as it had played on its own field. Neither its pitchers nor its batters were as effective. An exception may be noted in the case of Smith, who did pitch well enough to win any world series game or any other game of Base Ball, but as Brooklyn was unable to score a run for him his work went for naught. In Cleveland J. Johnston, the Brooklyn third baseman, was injured and did not take part in any game after the fourth.

Cadore was selected to pitch the fourth game for Brooklyn and was quite as unsuccessful as Caldwell had been for Cleveland. He did not show world series form. Coveleskie was Speaker's choice and simply breezed through the game, as the Brooklyn batters, never successful as a rule against spitball pitchers, were never a menace.

With one out in the first inning, Cadore gave Wambsganss a base on balls. Speaker singled to center, the ball going almost over second base. Wambsganss pulled up at second. Smith rapped a base hit to center field and Wambsganss scored. Speaker ran to third, from which he scored on Gardner's sacrifice fly to Myers. W. Johnston struck out.

After Sewell and O'Neill had batted safely in the second inning, Cadore was taken out of the game and Mamaux substituted. Cleveland failed to score. In the third inning, with Mamaux pitching, Wambsganss batted safely to right field. Speaker followed with a single to center. Then Mamaux was taken out and Marquard substituted. Burns replaced Smith in the Cleveland batting order and hit safely to center field, scoring both Wambsganss and Speaker. Gardner struck out. Wood, batting for W. Johnston, flied to center field. O'Neill was given a base on balls, but Coveleskie forced O'Neill out at second.

In the sixth inning, with Pfeffer pitching for Brooklyn, the first two batters, Sewell and O'Neill, were retired. Coveleskie batted safely, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on Evans' single. Wambsganss also batted safely, but Speaker fouled out.

The lone run made by Brooklyn was in the fourth. With Olson out of the way, J. Johnston batted safely to left and scored on Griffith's long two-bagger to right.

Brooklyn had no hopeful prospect in the game except in the inning in which it scored, and the players were helpless against Coveleskie. They were so feeble with the bat that they seemed to have lost their dash. Cleveland did not begin to make runs in proportion to the opportunities which offered. They had a good scoring opening in the second inning and in the seventh, and the Brooklyn were fortunate that they were not worse defeated. The score follows:

FIFTH GAME—AT CLEVELAND, OCTOBER 10

This contest is of a class of its own in a world series. The Brooklyn team never had a chance to win, although batting hard and fighting desperately. It seemed as if every combination of fate was against the players. It is no true that Bagby had the game in hand all of the time. He was pulled out more than one ticklish situation because the run of the game favored him. The Brooklyns were at a disadvantage from the start. In this contest Wambsganss made his triple play unassisted.

Grimes was opposed to Bagby, as had been the case in Brooklyn. Jamieson, first batter for Cleveland, hit safely to right. The ball was knocked down, but could not be fielded to first in time. With Wambsganss inclined to hit at his spitball, Grimes centered the plate for him, and he batted for single. Speaker bunted and Grimes sprawled on the ground trying to field the ball. Smith batted next. With two strikes against him, Grimes pitched squarely across the plate, less than shoulder high, and Smith lifted the ball over Cleveland's short right field fence for a home run, scoring three men ahead of him. Grimes admitted afterward that the ball was straight and fast, saying he had attempted a spitter which did not break.

In the fourth inning W. Johnston singled to center for Cleveland. He passed ball put him on second. Sewell was thrown out at first by Sheehan, who was playing third for Brooklyn. O'Neill was given a base on ball. Bagby batted a long fly to center field. The ball fell safely in a temporary stand, which had been built within playing space, and under ground rule went for a home run. Myers was under it and could have caught it but for the barrier. Thus Bagby scored two men ahead of him with a home run.

In the next inning Speaker hit to Sheehan, who threw wild to first base and Speaker went to second. Smith singled to center and Speaker scored. Gardner batted safely to left. W. Johnston sacrificed. Sewell fouled out to the catcher, and after O'Neill had been given a base on balls he was forced at second by Bagby.

The only run by the Brooklyn players was made in the ninth inning. Griffith struck out, and Wheat, Myers and Konetchy singled in succession, Wheat scoring.

Cleveland made the most of all of its chances. Brooklyn did not. In the first inning Olson started the game by batting safely and was left on third base. With one out in the second inning, Konetchy hit the boards of the fence in center field with a three-bagger, but was thrown out trying to score the base line again being blocked before the catcher had the ball. Miller started the third inning with a base hit, but was doubled up by Grimes. After that Olson and Sheehan batted safely. In the fifth inning occurred the triple play, unassisted, without which Brooklyn would have scored on run and would have had men on third and second with no one out. When began the seventh with a base hit, but was forced out. Krueger started the eighth with a base hit, and again there was a double play. The score of the game follows:

SIXTH GAME—AT CLEVELAND, OCTOBER 11

The only way in which Smith, Brooklyn, can be said to have been out-pitched by Mails, Cleveland, in the next to the last game of the series, is that one run was scored against Smith. It was fairly earned. Opportunities were missed by Brooklyn at bat which would have made victory easy for the National League champions.

It was a contest primarily of pitcher against pitcher. In the sixth inning Speaker batted a safe hit to left field. Burns found a comparatively low ball to his liking and straightened it out against the fence in center field, Speaker scoring the only run of the game.

With the bases filled in the second inning and two out, Miller batted weakly to Speaker. In the fourth inning, with one out, Brooklyn had two on bases, but both Kilduff and Miller were out on easy flies to the outfield. Neis began with a base on balls for Brooklyn in the sixth inning and was caught flat-footed off first by O'Neill.

In Cleveland's first, Evans began with a hit, but was nipped by several feet at second base on a presumable failure of the hit and run. Burns received the only base on balls which Smith gave in the second. He was forced out. Wood batted safely to left field. Sewell hit to Kilduff, who threw Gardner out at the plate. O'Neill forced Sewell out to Kilduff. Sewell began the sixth with a base hit, but Cleveland was smothered. Smith, after pitching two of the best games in world series history, only two runs having been scored against him, could win but one. The score of the game follows:

SEVENTH GAME—AT CLEVELAND, OCTOBER 12

The world series for 1920 ended with the seventh game at Cleveland when the Brooklynns were beaten for the third time by Coveleskie. It was by no means a listless game, although the National League champions again showed unexpected weakness with the bat.

Grimes faced Coveleskie for the first time in the series and pitched creditably enough, had his fellow players been able to do anything against Coveleskie. At the finish of the game the Cleveland enthusiasts swarmed over the field for souvenirs and to shake hands with the Cleveland players in congratulation. The box of President Dunn of the Cleveland club was surrounded by admiring friends.

In the fourth inning, with one out, Gardner batted safely to right field for a base. W. Johnston rapped a long single to right field, Gardner going to third. Sewell flied to Wheat. With O'Neill up, there was a conference at the plate. Johnston started to steal second after it was completed. Miller threw to Grimes and Gardner was choked back to third. With an easy play to get Johnston, Grimes threw the ball to the ground. It bounded to center field and Gardner scored.

With one out in the fifth inning, Jamieson singled to left field. He stole second. Wambsganss flied to Wheat. Speaker batted a long three-bagger into the corner next the temporary stand in center field and Jamieson scored. The last run of the series was made in the seventh inning. O'Neill finally hit a two-bagger in Cleveland. Coveleskie bunted to Grimes and O'Neill was run down between third and second. Coveleskie went to second on the play. Jamieson cracked a hard double to right and Coveleskie scored. It was fit that he should score the last run in the series after the good work that he had done for Cleveland. Wambsganss flied to center field. Speaker and Smith were given bases on balls. Again Grimes tightened up, as he had in other games, and Gardner forced Smith at second.

The best chance that Brooklyn had to score was in the third inning. With one out, Grimes hit safely. Olson was safe on Sewell's blunder. Sheehan batted the ball to right field, but the Brooklyn shadow of ill luck pursued the team, as the batted ball hit Olson and retired him. In other innings in which Brooklyn got men on bases it was with two hands out. The score of the game follows:

Baltimore-St. Paul Post-Season Series

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Baltimore	5	1	.833
St. Paul	1	5	.167

In post-season series St. Paul of the American Association appears to be as unlucky as the New York Giants were in the Temple Cup games, which were played years ago. In 1919 St. Paul lost to the Vernon Club of the Pacific Association in a play-off after the regular season had finished, and in 1920 St. Paul was defeated by Baltimore in five games out of six. Thus the International League won the minor league championship of the United States for 1920. St. Paul won the third game of the series, which was played at Baltimore. Bentley of the Baltimores, whether he played on the infield or pitched, made a capital record. As pitcher he took part in three winning games and Ogden took part in two. In 1919 nine games were played between St. Paul and Vernon, and in 1920 six games were enough between Baltimore and St. Paul. The scores of the games are as follows:

Fort Worth-Little Rock Post-Season Series

Fort Worth of the Texas League and Little Rock of the Southern Association played the first games for inter-league championship of the South and Southwest in 1920. The Fort Worth team, representative of the Texas League, won the series. The first two games were played at Fort Worth, and Fort Worth won both of them. The teams went to Little Rock for the third game, which was won by Little Rock. The fourth contest was a tie, the score being 2—2 when darkness made it impossible to play longer. The next game, which was played at Little Rock, was won by the local team, and both nines left Little Rock after the series was over and traveled to Fort Worth, where the succeeding game was played. This was won by Fort Worth after that team had been blanked for five innings. Their batters were clever enough to make six runs in the next three innings. Another trip followed back to Little Rock, and Fort Worth again won from the Southern Association champions, by the score of 4—2, ending the series. Little Rock had twelve players left on bases in the last game. The scores of the games are as follows:

Total—National League clubs won 42 games, American League clubs won 40 games.

On May 1, 1920, at Boston, the Brooklyn and Boston players of the National League equaled the minor league record for extra inning games and made a new record for the major leagues. They played twenty-six innings and at the end of the twenty-sixth, "Game" was called.

The record of twenty-six innings displaces that of twenty-four innings set in Boston on September 1, 1906, when the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Boston Americans by 4 to 1. The previous duration record in the National League was twenty-two innings. Brooklyn figured in that game, too, defeating Pittsburgh by 6 to 5 August 22, 1917, at Ebbets Field. The performance of May 1 tied the record for all professional Base Ball, as the Decatur and Bloomington clubs of the "Three Eye" League went twenty-six innings in May, 1909, before Decatur won by 2 to 1.

In addition to equaling the Decatur-Bloomington record, the game tied another mark of a major league character. Brooklyn scored in the fifth and Boston tallied in the sixth, after which there were twenty scoreless innings. This distinctive feature first was recorded in the game between Boston and Pittsburgh, September 1, 1918, when Pittsburgh won by 2 to 0 in the twenty-first inning.

Only twice did Brooklyn runners reach third base—in the fifth, in which the Brooklyns got their score, and again in the seventeenth inning.

The Brooklyn's filled the bases with one out. However, Oeschger's support was spectacular and a double play killed Brooklyn's chance.

The Brooklyn scored their single run of the contest in the fifth inning. Krueger, who was catching for the visitors, led off with a base on balls. Cadore was tossed out. Olson followed with a single over Maranville's head and Krueger crossed the plate. Olson was at bat ten times and that proved to be his only hit of the game.

The Bostons in the sixth inning bunched three hits and tied the score. With one out Cruise hit to left center for three bases and Holke sent a short fly to Wheat behind third. Wheat made a great running catch, but a possible double play at third was missed when Johnston failed to remain at the bag.

Cruise got back to the base safely and Boeckel followed with a single to right which scored Cruise. It was Boeckel's third consecutive hit. He went to second on the throw to the plate and Maranville, the next batter, doubled to center. Boeckel attempted to score, but was out at the plate, Hood to Cadore to Krueger. The score:

Many American League Records Broken

It was a great record season in the American League in 1920. All kinds of new records were made. Some of them were in finances, some in attendance and some in plays and by players, and the latter are the only ones that have to do with sport.

There is one apparent reason for the sport records. At the bottom of most of them stand the unusual batting of Ruth and Sisler, the collectively heavy batting of the American League, and higher grade of fielding by the organization as a whole. The table which follows summarizes what the American League players did:

Extra Infielding Records

Extra chances accepted by infielders are equivalent to extra hits by batsmen. They have been computed for the season of 1920, a new feature in the RECORD. No extra-inning games are included. The standard is set at eight chances in one game of nine innings. Careful comparison made seven chances a fair average, but owing to the unusually good fielding last year, it was decided to move the mark to eight. Pratt of the New York A. L. club leads all players, with Bancroft, New York N. L., second. Pratt equaled the American League record of sixteen chances accepted in one game. The complete record of infielding merits for 1920 follows, the table showing in how many games an infielder accepted eight chances or more:

All Home Run Records Broken

All home run records in Base Ball, no matter in what league, were broken in 1920 by George Herman Ruth, more commonly known as "Babe." In 1919 he made twenty-nine home runs, which surpassed all "big league" records prior to that year. It was generally believed that no human being would play Base Ball in 1920 who could make a record superior to that of Ruth in 1919, unless it were the same "Colossus of Swat," as he has since become known, which is one of the many titles bestowed upon him by fanciful writers.

Yet in 1920 Ruth was within four of doubling the record that he made in 1919. He batted fifty-four major league home runs, four less than twice the twenty-nine of the previous year. It is the most prodigious feat by a batter in all the history of Base Ball. How many more home runs he might have batted had not the pitchers given him so many bases on balls, is mere conjecture. It is safe to assume, however, that the total would have been more than sixty. The figure test was made of the home runs that he batted, as compared with the number of times at which he was at bat in the season, and his percentage indicated a normal total of sixty-five home runs for the year. Between the bases on balls which were given him and the games in which he was unable to play on account of illness or injury, it will be noted that he ran very true to "score form" when his total stopped at fifty-four.

When Ruth broke the record in 1919 statistic sharps began to rake up minor league records which were greater than his. The records they found were all authentic, but, of course, had little bearing upon major league games, where the batting is infinitely better than in the smaller leagues and the fences longer. The last such record to be found was that of Perry Werden, who batted forty-five home runs some years ago in the old Western Association. The record was all right, but the Western Association in those days had some Base Ball grounds that were not much larger than a peony bed. That is why so many home runs were made.

When Ruth went over Werden's forty-five he went "over the top" for the last time, with no more trenches to be taken. He stands, today, king of all batters since Base Ball time began.

It was the opinion of the editor of the RECORD that at least a year or two might elapse after 1919 before Ruth might be expected so far to outdo himself as he did in 1920, but everything came right for him and assisted him. He was transferred to the New York American League Base Ball Club from Boston, and received with such popular acclaim that his spirits were effervescing all the summer and his enthusiasm above the boiling point.

The change in the pitching rules came most opportunely in his life, because the pitchers unquestionably were batted out more savagely in 1920 than they had been in any year preceding. The batters went to the plate with more confidence than they had possessed for seasons.

In connection with this, one must not forget that it was very seldom that Ruth got a really good ball at which he could swing. Many of his home runs were made on almost wild pitches. His skill is best understood when we consider that he made his home runs when the ball was at his knee equally as well as when the ball was at his shoulder. The extraordinary power which he puts into that wicked golf swing from behind his shoulder seems able to drive a ball out of any ordinary fenced ground. It must be, too, that his eyesight is above the average which is possessed by humanity, since it is the rare exception when he makes a home run that he does not meet the ball squarely in the center. To sit behind him and hear the ring of the leather off a good piece of ash wood is a treat to the man who knows what a ring of that kind means in batting a base ball. In two years Ruth has made eighty-three home runs in regularly scheduled games of the American League.

Some are looking into the future and wondering what he will make in 1921. It seems rather foolish to try to be a prophet, after the almost unanimous failure to prophesy correctly in 1920, but if Ruth does not establish a total of something like one hundred and twenty-five home runs for three straight years in major league Base Ball, there will be some individuals in the United States most abominably disappointed.

Ruth did not get going with his home run bat until May 1. On that date, at the Polo Grounds, he batted his first of the season against Pennock of Boston. His last home run was made in Philadelphia, September 29, against Keefe. On June 2, in New York City, playing against Washington, he made a home run against Carlson and another against Zachary in the same game, then one against Snyder in the second game. On June 25 he batted two home runs in the same afternoon, with Pennock in the box for Boston, and two June 30 against Philadelphia. His next double-header was at Chicago, July 19, against Kerr of the White Sox. On August 6, in Detroit, he made two home runs against Dauss. Then, on September 4, he perpetrated a double-header against Jones and Bush in Boston. He followed with another September 24 at the Polo Grounds, when he made home runs against Acosta and Shaw of the Washington club. The last double performance was against Philadelphia, in Philadelphia, when he made two home runs against Rommel of the Athletics. The records combined, showing a total of 83 for the years 1919 and 1920, are as follows:

League Meetings

NATIONAL LEAGUE SPECIAL MEETING.

Club owners of the National League, at a special meeting held in New York, June 23, went on record as favoring a restoration of a working agreement with minor leagues. President Heydler was directed to notify the American League and the minor leagues to that effect and to suggest a conference. The National League committee named was President Heydler and Messrs. Herrmann, Ebbets and Dreyfuss. The league went on record as indorsing the action of the National Commission in barring contract jumpers from the major leagues. Amendment of old series rules was suggested to define more clearly the division of players' receipts of clubs finishing second and third in the two leagues, as distinguished from a club which may play a city series. A plan to have the players share in the series the same as players was discussed and voted upon. President Heydler was instructed to make another effort to reach an agreement with President Johnson of the American League in regard to a chairman of the National Commission. The following resolutions were adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, The chief objects of this league are to protect the mutual interests of professional Base Ball clubs and players and to surround the game with such safeguards as to warrant absolute public confidence in its integrity and methods; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That this National League commends the Chicago Ball Club for forcing into the full light of publicity its reasons for the discharge of Player Lee Magee, which club, prevailing against all overtures of postponement or compromise, awarded an unqualified jury verdict upholding all issues vital to the good reputation of the game; and further, be it

RESOLVED, That we commend the president of this league for his indefatigable efforts in seeking out and bringing to bear the evidence, which was presented before the public tribunal with such relentless force and preponderance as to serve as an everling warning to other intending wrongdoers.

RESOLVED, further, That this league and the individual clubs thereof will continue to spare no effort to drive the gamblers from our parks and will continue to give our president unqualified support in any measure he may see fit to take to rid the organization of any undesirables, if there be such now remaining within our ranks.

NATIONAL LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the National League, held in New York City, beginning December 14, John A. Heydler, president of the organization, was continued in office for a term of three years beyond the original date of his election, extending his term to 1924, inclusive. His salary was increased. It was agreed by the league that it would report favorably to the Advisory Committee, the new controlling power for organized Base Ball, upon the petition of the spitball pitchers to be permitted to use their special delivery until the close of their major league careers. It had been voted in 1919 that no spitball pitching would be permitted after 1920. The Chicago and Pittsburgh clubs voted against the extension of the use of the spitball. The league affirmed the resolution forbidding the recall of waivers. In the future the owners of clubs may recall waiver requests if they so desire. The American League operates under the same system. The new National Agreement, which had been drawn up by the joint committee of reorganization, was unanimously adopted and signed. The agreement is to cover a period of twenty years. Directors chosen for the coming year were August Herrmann of Cincinnati, Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn, William F. Baker of Philadelphia, Samuel Breadon of St. Louis. The Brooklyn Base Ball club was awarded the pennant for 1920. It was agreed to permit visiting clubs to have thirty minutes for batting practice. It was decided to begin the season of 1921 on April 13.

AMERICAN LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the American League, which was held in New York City, December 17, a board of directors was elected consisting of Jacob Ruppert, New York; Phil Ball, St. Louis; Clark Griffith, Washington, and James Dunn, Cleveland. When Mr. Ruppert learned that Messrs. Comiskey and Frazee had not been returned as directors he resigned from the position and Tom Shibe of Philadelphia was chosen in his place. The American League ratified the new National Agreement. It was voted to begin the season of 1921 on April 13. Spitball pitchers who were registered in 1920 were given permission to use the spitball until the termination of their major league careers. Inter-league waivers were deemed unnecessary. It was decided to hold the annual meeting of the league in New York City in the future. The championship for 1920 was awarded to the Cleveland club.

NEW INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the New International League began in New York City, December 13. It was voted to change the name of the organization to the National Association of Professional Base Ball Clubs. David L. Fulton who was a candidate for re-election as president, was defeated, and John Conway Toole of New York City was chosen to succeed him. Prior to the election of Mr. Toole, C. H. Knapp of Baltimore had been chosen as president. He declined to serve when the league went on record in favor of the draft plan, frankly asserting that the Baltimore club, with which he is connected, was an opponent of that system and he could not consistently act as president of the league with such the case. Subsequently, after an address before the league by Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American Association, it was decided to oppose the draft plan, but Mr. Knapp would not reconsider his declination of the office of president of the organization.

At the second session of the league, which was held December 14, it was decided to abandon the new title of National Association of Professional Base Ball Clubs and return to the old designation of New International League. It was agreed that the board of directors in the future will consist of the presidents of all eight clubs. It was decided to start the 1921 season on April 21, and to play 168 games. To obtain funds to meet the current expenses the league it was voted to tax each admission two cents for the season of 1921. It was also agreed to make the term of office of the president-elect five years, Mr. Toole demurring against an election for one year only.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

At the meeting of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Leagues, which was held in Kansas City in November, 1920, M. H. Sexton was re-elected president and John H. Farrell, secretary. Mr. Sexton intimates that he would accept if the office of president had a salary attached to it and the president were given something to do. Provision was made to comply with his request. The meeting was addressed by President Johnson of the American League and August Herrmann of the National League, relative to the proposed reorganization of Base Ball. Committees were appointed to meet with the major leagues in Chicago. Territorial league right of territory for clubs in the National Association was extended from five miles to ten miles. The draft price of Class C was advanced from $250 to $500. Buffalo was selected for the annual meeting in 1921.

The following league officials were chosen as members of the National Board of Arbitration: Thomas J. Hickey, president of the American Association.

ation; J. Cal Ewing of the Pacific Coast League, and David L. Fultz, president of the International League, as representatives of the Class AA leagues; A. R. Tearney, president of the Three-Eye and Western Leagues; Dan O'Neill, president of the Eastern League, and John D. Martin, president of the Southern Association, representing Class A Leagues; Robert Brown of the Pacific International League; George H. Maines, president of the Michigan-Ontario League, and E. W. Dickerson, president of the Central League, representing the Class B Leagues; N. P. Corish of the South Atlantic League, representing Class C leagues, and W. R. Rose, president of the Florida State League, as representative of the Class D leagues.

MAJOR LEAGUE JOINT MEETING.

At a meeting of the major leagues in joint session, which was held in Chicago, January 12, both signed the new National Agreement which placed Judge Kenesaw M. Landis at the head of organized Base Ball for a term of seven years. The minor leagues had agreed to the agreement. Their copy differed in one empowering word from that signed by the majors. This difference was due to a disagreement in the joint meeting of the draft committee. The minors announced, however, they would sign an agreement identical with that of the majors. Individual major league club owners and others connected with major league clubs affixed their names to a new agreement whereby they pledged themselves not to criticise one another publicly, or talk about one another, and to accept any decision which might be made by Judge Landis regardless of their personal opinion of it. Both major league presidents signed this pledge.

In reading the copy of the new National Agreement prior to signing, Judge Landis called attention to the fact that it contained a section saying that the Commissioner, after investigating any affair he considered detrimental to Base Ball, could "recommend such action as he deemed advisable." Judge Landis interrupted the reading to say that this section must read "take such action." He added, "I wouldn't take this job for all of the gold in the world unless I knew my hands were free." President Ban Johnson moved that the word "recommend" be changed to "take," which was seconded by Tom Shibe, and the change was made.

New forms of players contracts were approved by the major league members. One clause in the new contract provides that the player pledge his loyalty to the club and to the American public, also to conform to high standards of fair play and good sportsmanship.

ADVISORY BOARD MEETS.

At the first meeting of the Advisory Board of Base Ball in Chicago, January 14, it was agreed that for the world series the compensation allotted to four umpires should be the amount of a winning player's share and a losing player's share to be divided equally among four. It was agreed to deduct the amount of fifteen per cent from the receipts of the world series for the use of the Advisory Board, instead of ten per cent as for the defunct National Commission which had been deducted in the past. Rules for the procedure of the new Advisory Board were discussed as well as provisions for the new National Agreement.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION MEETING.

At a meeting of the members of the National Association of Professional Base Ball Leagues, which was held in Chicago beginning January 10, amendments to the constitution were adopted by which it is hoped to end gambling, and for which a board to supervise post-season inter-league games was created. The amendment in regard to gambling gives the president of the Association power over all clubs to maintain a strict supervision of their grounds to prevent open betting or pool selling, and to investigate any rumor in reference to any player being interested in pools or wagers upon Base Ball games. The board to control post-season series, it was ordered, is to be composed of the president of the Association and two additional members.

The National Board of Arbitration, which governs the minor leagues, was changed from a body of nine to one of seven members, two being from Class AA, two from Class A and one each from Classes B, C and D.

It was voted to restore the draft, but reservations were made by which the restoration was not made compulsory. Any league so desiring may remain out of the draft, and the American Association and the New International League announced their intention of not taking part in it. Leagues which do not take part in the general draft will not be permitted to draft players from leagues which do go in, but may draft from each other. The Pacific Coast League, the only other Class AA organization, will take part in the draft.

The draft season was made from October 15 to October 20, and the draft prices were set as follows: Class AA, $5,000; Class A, $4,000; Class B $2,500; Class C, $1,500; Class D, $1,000.

The draft price of $5,000 for Class AA leagues was the one recently suggested by major league representatives. Many of the minor leagues thought $7,500 should be the price.

The minor leaguers also established a new scale of player and salary limits as follows: Class AA, no salary limit, 35 players until 30 days after season opens and then 25.

Class A, salary limit of $4,250, player limit of 30 for first 30 days and 20 thereafter.

Class B, salary limit of $3,200 and player limit of 20 for 30 days and 16 thereafter.

Class C, salary limit of $2,650 and player limit of 18 for 30 days and 14 thereafter.

Class D, salary limit of $2,400 and player limit of 18 for 30 days and 14 thereafter.

Failure to live up to these limits will result in a fine of $100 for the first offense, $200 if the case is not rectified in 10 days, and then a fine of $300 and decision by the National Board of Control.

The club owners decided to classify leagues on the basis of the last Federal census, instead of the school census, and under the following scale:

Leagues with 250,000 to 1,000,000 population, Class B; leagues with 150,000 to 250,000 population, Class C; leagues under 250,000 population, Class D. Classes AA and A will remain as at present—more than 1,000,000 population.

The annual meeting was set for the first Tuesday in December, to take place in a city represented in the Association.

Players Rumler, Borton, Maggert and Dale were expelled from organized Base Ball. M. H. Sexton and John H. Farrell were chosen to act as members of Advisory Board to act in conjunction with Presidents Heydler and Johnson and Commissioner Landis.

INDIVIDUAL BATTING

The leading batsman for 1920 is Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis club. Hornsby engaged in 149 games, six less than his club played, and compiled the splendid batting percentage of .370. Of the forty-five champion batsmen since the organization of the National League, but nineteen have finished with a higher batting mark than Hornsby. Hugh Duffy turning in the highest percentage when he hit for .438 in 1894.

Hornsby's mark of .370 has been excelled but four times since 1900, when Hans Wagner hit that year for .380; the following year when Jesse Burkett touched .382; again in 1905 when Cy Seymour had .377, and in 1912 when Henry Zimmerman led with .372.

Hornsby made the most hits, 218, and also leads in two-base hits, with 44. Milton Stock is the leading one-base hitter, with 170 singles; Hy Myers leads in three-base hits, with 22, and Cy Williams occupies home run honors, with 15 home runs.

Rogers Hornsby leads the long hitters with 329 total bases, for a percentage of .559.

Three players, Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis, Milton J. Stock of St. Louis and Ross Young of New York, garnered more than two hundred hits as their season's portion. Only thirteen National League batters have reaped more hits per season than has Hornsby, with Willie Keeler of Baltimore the leader, with 243 hits during the season of 1897.

George Burns of New York leads the run scorers with 115 runs. Not since 1911, when James Sheppard of Chicago tallied 121 runs, has any player reached this high mark in runs scored.

Max Carey of Pittsburgh leads the runners along the base paths, with 52 stolen bases.

George Cutshaw of Pittsburgh is the leading sacrifice hitter, with 37 sacrifice hits.

Five players engaged in every game which their clubs played, as follows: George Kelly, New York; James Johnston, Brooklyn, and Milton Stock, St. Louis, 155 games each; Louis Duncan, Cincinnati, 154, and Norman Boeckel, Boston, 153 games.

Milton Stock went to the bat the most times, 639.

There were forty-nine cases of hitting safely in ten or more consecutive games, with Eddie Roush of Cincinnati the leader. Roush on August 27 began a streak of safe hitting that endured for twenty-seven successive contests and yielded 46 hits in 114 times at bat till September 22, when Charles Adams of Pittsburgh stopped Roush.

David Bancroft of New York was the only player that got six hits in six times at bat in one game. This Bancroft did on June 28, against Philadelphia.

Eleven players garnered five hits in a game, one player, Ross Young of New York performing the feat twice. Walter Maranville, Boston; Earl Smith, George Burns and Ross Young, New York; Davis Robertson, Chicago; William Southworth, Pittsburgh; Clifton Heathcote, St. Louis; Turner Barber, Chicago; Emil Meusel and Eugene Paulette, Philadelphia; Jacques Fournier, St. Louis, were the men who made five hits in as many times at bat.

Eight players tallied four runs in one game during the past season, viz.: Fred Williams and Emil Meusel of Philadelphia, Charles Hollocher and George Paskert of Chicago, George Cutshaw of Pittsburgh, Henry Groh of Cincinnati, Jacques Fournier of St. Louis and Peter Kilduff of Brooklyn.

There were one hundred and six shutouts scored last season.

St. Louis leads in club batting with a percentage of .289; made the most hits, 1,589; the greatest number of total bases, 2,115; most singles, 1,223, and got the greatest number of two-base hits, 238. Brooklyn made the most three-base hits, 99, and Philadelphia batted out the greatest number of home runs, 64.

New York leads in scoring, with 682 runs, and Pittsburgh is the leading base stealing club, with 181 stolen bases.

Chicago leads in sacrifice hits, with 220.

Two hundred and thirty-seven players were used by the eight National League clubs during the past season.

INDIVIDUAL FIELDING.

Charles Grimm leads the first basemen, with a percentage of .995. George Kelly had the greatest number of putouts, 1,759; the most assists, 103, and most total chances, 1,873.

Morris Rath heads the second basemen, with a percentage of .977, while Rogers Hornsby made the most putouts, 343; assists, 524, and also the greatest number of total chances, 901.

Charles Deal leads the third basemen, with a percentage of .973. Norman Boeckel made the most putouts, 219, and the greatest number of total chances, 518, while Milton Stock compiled the most assists, 300.

David Bancroft, besides leading the shortstops, with a percentage of .955, had the most putouts, 362; assists, 598, and greatest number of total chances, 1,005.

William Southworth leads the outfielders, with a percentage of .991. Edd Roush made the most putouts, 410, and also had the greatest number of total chances, 439. A tie exists for most number of assists, Ross Young and Clifton Heathcote having 26 apiece.

Otto Miller leads the catchers, with a percentage of .986, and also made the most putouts, 418. Ivy Wingo caught the greatest number of games, 107; George O'Neil had the most assists, 153, and Vernon Clemons the greatest number of total chances, 531.

Wilbur Cooper heads the pitchers, with a percentage of .989. Arthur Nehf made the most putouts, 18; Grover Alexander had the most assists, 105, and Burleigh Grimes the greatest number of total chances, 119.

Of the four triple plays in the National League, Pittsburgh executed two, an odd feature being that Wilbur Cooper while pitching, July 7, and again on August 21, began both triple plays for Pittsburgh by catching fly balls batted by Mack Wheat.

Pittsburgh leads in fielding, with a percentage of .971. Brooklyn and St. Louis are tied for the most putouts, with 4,277 each. New York had the most assists, 2,240, and greatest number of fielding chances, 6,682. New York made the most double plays, 137; St. Louis had the most left on bases, 1,116, and Cincinnati the least, 984.

In arranging the National League pitchers of 1920 in the order of their effectiveness, it was found expedient to divide the pitchers into three groups, as was done in 1917, 1918 and 1919. The first group embraces all those who bore the brunt of the campaign and pitched at least ten (10) complete games; the second, those who participated in a minimum of ten (10) games, regardless of the length of same; the third comprising all others who took part in a championship contest.

The percentage of games won and lost is given, with notation of the relative position of each pitcher, this special record being supplied in order that comparison may be made with the official earned run rating.

Grover Alexander, Chicago, has the title of leading pitcher, with an average of least runs earned per game of 1.91. Alexander held this honor for the season of 1919 with an average of 1.72. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, has best percentage for games won and lost, .676. Grover Alexander, Chicago, won the most games, 27. Eppa Rixey, Philadelphia, lost the most games, 22. Jesse Haines, St. Louis, pitched in the most games, 47. Grover Alexander, Chicago, pitched in the most complete games, 33. William Sherdel, St. Louis, finished the most games, 28. Grover Alexander, Chicago, pitched in the most innings, 363. Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh, led in shutout games, 8. Grover Alexander, Chicago, led in strikeouts, 173. Ferd Schupp, St. Louis, allowed the most bases on balls, 127. Charles E. Ponder, Pittsburgh, made the most wild pitches, 10. John Scott, Boston, hit the most batsmen, 13. Grover Alexander, Chicago, allowed the most sacrifice hits, 335, also pitched to the greatest number of batters, 1,447. Eppa Rixey, Philadelphia, allowed the most sacrifice hits, 49. John Scott, Boston, allowed the most runs to be scored, 148. Joseph Geschger, Boston, allowed the most earned runs, 115.

Grover Alexander, Chicago, enjoyed the longest consecutive winning streak, 11 victories.
A tie exists for longest consecutive losing streak, four pitchers—John Beuton, Richard Rudolph, Elwood Martin and John Scott—losing 7 straight games apiece.

Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh, gave a marvelous exhibition of control by permitting but 18 of the 1,035 batsmen facing him to get bases on balls, this in the 263 innings he pitched. In 1919, Adams pitching a like number of innings to 1,017 batters, issued 23 bases on balls.

1920 PITCHERS NOT OTHERWISE RATED.

INDIVIDUAL BATTING.

For the second time in fourteen years Tyrus Raymond Cobb was forced to yield first place to a rival in the contest for individual batting honors. The new leader, George Sisler, first baseman of the St. Louis team, finished with a mark of .407, nineteen points ahead of Manager Tris Speaker of Cleveland (.388), who in turn was six points in front of Joe Jackson (.382), Chicago.

Sisler's work during the past season stamps him as one of the great players of all time. Participating in every game his team played, 154, he led all in times at bat, 631; in safe hits, 257—a new American League record, Cobb's 248, made in 1911, being the high mark until now. Sisler was also first in total bases, 399; 49 doubles, 18 triples and 19 home runs supplementing his 172 singles. Tied with Manager Speaker for second place in runs scored, with 137, first in three-base hits, second in two-base hits, tied with his team-mate, Jacobson, for second place in runs driven in, 122, second in stolen bases, with 42, while he was thrown out in attempts to pilfer but seventeen times.

Equally spectacular was the work of George H. Ruth, the slugging outfielder of the New York team. Ruth batted 54 home runs, a greater number than any team in either major league compiled. Ruth's wonderful performance was the more extraordinary because he was out of the lineup in twelve games, and in his 142 contests he was officially "at bat" 173 times less than Sisler, being obliged to accept 148 bases on balls from opposing pitchers, while Sisler was passed but 46 times. Ruth crossed the plate 158 times, leading Speaker and Sisler, who were second, by 21 runs. He also led the league in driving in runs, 137, being thus responsible for 241 of the 838 runs scored by the Yankees. Ruth struck out 80 times, finishing second in this department to his team-mate, Ward, who struck out 84 times. Meusel, of the same team, also struck out 72 times, but Jimmy Dykes of the Athletics finished next to Ruth with 73.

Edgar S. Rice, the fleet outfielder of the Washington team, stole 62 bases in 92 attempts, his nearest competitor being Sisler. Robert Roth, also of Washington, was third in stolen bases, with 24 out of 36 efforts.

Manager Tris Speaker drove out 50 two-baggers, one more than Sisler and eight ahead of Joe Jackson, who was third in the list of two-base sluggers.

Joe Gedeon of the Browns was credited with 48 sacrifices, as was also Owen Bush of Detroit. McInnis of Boston was third, with 45.

Tris Speaker, with 97 bases on balls, and Harry Hooper, with 88, were nearest to Ruth in being awarded free passage to first base.

INDIVIDUAL FIELDING.

John McInnis, Boston, led the first basemen in fielding, with the splendid average of .996, ninety-one of his 1,667 accepted chances being assists. Pipp of New York handled 1,749 chances, of which one hundred were assists, and Sisler 1,617, of which 140 were assists.

Eddie Collins of Chicago is first among the second basemen, with a percentage of .976, and for the fourth time in his career in the American League he leads all in the number of accepted chances, his record for the season reading 920.

Larry Gardner of Cleveland has an average of .976 at third base, with 528 accepted chances, while Everett Scott is first among the shortstops, with 826 accepted chances for an average of .973. This is the fifth consecutive season that Scott has finished first among the fielders of his position.

When Sam Rice accepted 478 chances—454 putouts and 24 assists—for an average of .960, he established a new major league record. The nearest approach to this phenomenal performance is: Max Carey, Pittsburgh, 468, 1917; Oscar Felsch, Chicago, 464, 1917, and Tris Speaker, Boston, 455, 1914. Rice is far in advance of his nearest rival William Jacobson, St. Louis, who handled 394 putouts and 18 assists. Felsch, Chicago, is third, with 385 putouts and 25 assists, and leads in percentage with an average of .981, being charged with but 8 errors.

For the eighth consecutive year Ray Schalk of Chicago leads the catchers in putouts, with 581. Schalk also set a new record the past season by working behind the plate in 151 games. Steve O'Neill of Cleveland caught in 148 games, while Ralph Perkins, the young star of the Athletics, caught in 146 contests. Perkins led the league in assists, with 179, Gharrity of Washington being second, with 148, O'Neill third, with 128, and Severeid fourth, with 111.

Faeth, Cleveland, and McGraw, New York, did not win or lose a game.															..	1	1	7	000

The leading pitcher of the year was Robert Shawkey of New York, who worked in 38 games, 267 innings, and allowed but 73 runs for an average of 2.46 for each full game of nine innings. Stanley Coveleskie, Cleveland, was second, with an earned run average of 2.48. Coveleskie appeared in 41 games, worked 315 innings and allowed 87 runs. Urban Shocker, St. Louis, followed Coveleskie with a 2.71 average, gained in 38 games, 246 innings, in which opponents scored 74 times.

Edwin Rommel and David E. Keefe, two youngsters of the Athletics, were fourth and sixth, with averages of 2.84 and 2.97, respectively. James C. Bagby, Cleveland, who led the league in number of games won, 31, holds fifth position. His opponents earned 2.89 runs per game from his deceptive delivery in 340 innings. Bagby pitched in more games—48—than any other pitcher and also in more innings.

Carl Mays of New York appeared in 45 contests, winning 26 and losing 11, finishing second to Bagby on the basis of games won and lost. Mays pitched 312 innings and gave 3.06 earned runs per game. In games won, Stanley Coveleskie was third, with 24, and Urban Faber of Chicago fourth, with 23 victories. However, Dick Kerr, Chicago, was third in percentage, with 21 wins and 9 losses, a percentage of .700, with Elmer Myers fourth as a result of 11 victories and 5 defeats for an average of .688. Faber was second to Bagby in innings pitched, 319, and seventh in the earned run table, with a record of 2.99 in 40 games.

Besides Rommel and Keefe, Walter Mails, Cleveland; William Burwell and William Bayne, St. Louis; Warren Collins, New York; Jose Acosta, Washington; Harry Courtney, Washington, and Bryan Harris of Philadelphia were other newcomers who did well. Elmer Myers, transferred from Cleveland to Boston in mid-season, closed the year with a run of nine straight victories.

GRAND NATIONAL ALL-AMERICA BASE BALL TEAM

Players on National Championship Teams who have played in one position in 50 games (pitchers 25 games) or over and whose combined records of Fielding and Batting (pitchers' record includes Percentage of Victories, Fielding and Batting) rank the highest in each position covering the period of fifty years from the commencement of Professional Base Ball, in 1871, to 1920, inclusive.

[NOTE.—The All-America Teams are made up of players in Champion Teams and not necessarily on best records.]

Position, Name and Club	Year	Games	Percentage Won	Fielding Percentage	Batting Percentage	Total
Pitcher— A. G. SPALDING Boston	1875	63	.899	.858	.318	2.075

Center Field—* HUGH DUFFY Boston	1893	131958	.378	1.336
Right Field— WM. KEELER Baltimore	1896	127973	.392	1.365
Total Average.....899	.940	.377	1.416

*Wm. Keeler played center field on the Brooklyn team of 1899, and in this position had a record in fielding of .970 and in batting of .376, a total of 1.346, which would entitle him to the center field position on the Grand National "All-America" Team, but as he had a higher record as right fielder of the Baltimore team in 1896, the center field was given to Hugh Duffy of Boston with the next highest record of 1.336. A clerical error was made in the Record Book of 1905, in placing Hugh Jennings' name in the shortstop position on the Grand National "All-America" Team, with his splendid record of .943 in fielding and .386 in batting, totaling 1.329, instead of Geo. Wright, with his still more remarkable record of .940 in fielding and .422 in batting, totaling 1.362.

Faber, Chicago, vs. Philadelphia, July 14, 1915. George D. Weaver, Chicago, vs. Cleveland, September 6, 1919. R. F. Roth, Washington, vs. New York A.L., May 31, 1920.

*No attempts made to stop steals.

Seldom score in all of the nine innings.

It seldom happens in Base Ball that a team tallies in every inning of a game. Two major league contests in which the winners scored in each of the nine innings follow:

At Cleveland, August 15, 1889, Cleveland vs. Boston.

Cleveland	1	1	3	2	1	6	1	3	1—19
Boston	0	4	0	1	1	1	0	0	1—8

Pitchers—E. Bakely, H. Gruber and L. Twitchell; M. Madden.

At Chicago, June 29, 1897, Chicago vs. Louisville.

Chicago	3	5	7	1	2	1	2	7	8—36
Louisville	0	0	1	0	5	0	1	0	0—7

Pitchers—James J. Callahan; Charles C. Fraser and Jones.

In both of the foregoing games the home team went to bat first.

On July 24, 1901, the Pittsburgh Nationals defeated Cincinnati at Pittsburgh, the Pirates scoring in every inning but the ninth, which they did not have to play.

Score:	Pittsburgh	1	1	2	2	1	2	1	1	x—11
	Cincinnati	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	0—2

Boston defeated Cleveland A.L., September 16, 1903, at Boston, also scoring in every inning but the ninth. Score:

Boston	2	2	3	1	1	3	1	1	x—14
Cleveland	0	3	4	0	0	0	0	0	0—7

Pitchers—T. Hughes, N. Gibson, Boston; E. Killian, F. Donahue, Cleveland.

September 9, 1916, the scoring was peculiar in the Detroit-St. Louis game, being as follows:

Detroit	1	1	3	3	2	2	0	0	0—12
St. Louis	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	3	3—8

Pitchers—H. Coveleskie; C. Weillman, D. Davenport and E. Hamilton.

Pinch hitters who have made home run with three men on bases.

On September 30, 1910, Beals Becker of New York N.L. hit home run with bases filled when acting as pinch hitter in game with Boston. Becker batted for George Wiltse against Cliff Curtis. Other pinch hitters who accomplished this feat: Michael J. O'Neill, St. Louis, vs. Boston N.L., June 3, 1902, against Charles Pittinger, in ninth; Martin Kavanagh, Cleveland, vs. Boston A.L., September 24, 1916, batted for J. J. Boehling in fifth inning, against H. Leonard.

Consecutive batting.

In the National Association, on June 18, 1874, the Mutuals of Brooklyn scored 33 runs, Chicago 1.

August 20, 1886, Baltimore vs. Athletics A.A., score 1—0, each club made only one hit. Same performance July 4, 1906—Chicago 1, vs. Pittsburgh N.L. 0.

A. C. Anson has wonderful record of twenty-two years' service in one club, 1876—1897; acted as manager of Chicago National League club for nineteen years.

In game Chicago vs. Washington A.L., May 12, 1915, Faber, Chicago, held Washington to three hits, and pitched only 67 balls during the game.

Most hits in succession by a player.

11, Tris Speaker, Cleveland A.L., 1920—July 8 (first game), at Washington; singles in eighth and ninth innings, off Shaw. July 8 (second game), single in first inning, off Snyder; beat out a bunt in third inning, off Snyder; singled in fourth inning, off Snyder; singled in sixth inning, off Schacht; beat out a bunt in eighth inning, off Schacht. July 9, at Washington; singled in first inning, off Zachary; sacrificed in fourth; walked in sixth; singled in seventh, off Zachary; singled in eighth, off Zachary; retired from game on account of lame leg. July 10 (first game), at Washington; doubled in first inning, off Snyder.

10, J. Gettman, Washington N.L., taken from the following old clipping: "President Nick Young announces that the feat of Gettman of the Washingtons, of making ten safe hits out of ten consecutive games at the bat last week, established a record in the league. In Friday's game against Cleveland, Gettman made four hits, with a total of eight bases—two singles, a double and a home run—and Saturday, the first six times he faced the Cincinnati pitchers, he drove out four singles, a three-bagger and a home run, a total of 11 bases and a grand total consecutively of 19 bases."

10, Edward J. Konetchy, Brooklyn N.L., 1919—June 28 (second game), one double and two singles in last three times at bat, against Jacobs of Philadelphia. June 29, one triple and four singles in five times at bat, against Packard and Woodward of Philadelphia. July 1, two singles in first two times at bat, against Toney of New York.

Most successive hits by one National League club.

TEAMS HITLESS FOR NINE INNINGS, BUT NOT NO-HIT GAMES.

When Jesse J. Haines of the St. Louis Cardinals was beaten by Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Cubs in 17 innings on October 1, 1920, by a score of 3-2, he turned the Chicagoans back hitless for 9½ innings. Merkle doubled with two down in the sixth, and no hits were made until Marriott singled with one gone in the sixteenth, so Haines had a record of 9½ innings of hitless ball. On May 11, 1919, Walter Johnson of Washington held the New York A.L. club to two hits in 12 innings at New York—singles by Peckinpaugh with one out in the first and by Pratt with none out in the eleventh. This gave Johnson a record of 9½ innings of hitless ball. The game resulted in a runless tie. Waite C. Hoyt of the Red Sox practically duplicated Johnson's performance on September 24 of the same year in the same city. In an extra-nning game against Shawkey, Pipp tripled and Pratt sacrifice flied in the thirteenth, from the third to the thirteenth Hoyt pitched perfect ball, no one getting on.

Unusual Incidents in Major Leagues

NOTE—The editors will welcome additions to this list (major league championship contests only) if properly authenticated. Send a description, including date of game, to Spalding's Official Base Ball Record, 45 Rose Street, New York.

Assists by pitchers reach double figures.

11 Assists—McConnell, New York, against Boston A.L., September 2, 1912; Wolfgang, Chicago, against Washington A.L., August 29, 1914. 10 Assists—Peters, Chicago, against Washington A.L., May 30, 1912.

Catcher throws out three would-be base stealers in one inning.

Nunamaker, New York, caught High off second on pitchout and Crawford and Veatch trying to steal second base. New York vs. Detroit A.L., second inning, August 3, 1914.

Five putouts by pitcher.

Joe Wood, Boston, vs. St. Louis A.L., May 15, 1912.

Few balls pitched in a game.

Sallee of Cincinnati pitched only 65 balls in nine-inning game against Brooklyn, September 21, 1919.

Retired side on three pitched balls.

On June 3, 1919, George Dauss of Detroit A.L., in the sixth inning of the game in that city, retired the opposing Chicago on three pitched balls, John Collins flying to Cobb, Risberg grounding to Jones and Ray Schalk flying to Cobb. Other pitchers who have done this are: Walter Johnson, Washington, sixth inning, against Philadelphia A.L., May 26, 1913; Fred Coumbe, Cleveland, sixth inning, against Washington A.L., August 19, 1915; Walter Johnson, Washington, second inning, against St. Louis A.L., June 1, 1917; Edward Klepfer, Cleveland, first inning, against St. Louis A.L., June 27, 1917; Maurice Craft, Washington, sixth inning, against Detroit A.L., September 21, 1917; S. Coveleskie, Cleveland, seventh inning, against Philadelphia A.L., August 6, 1920.

George H. Ruth, Boston A.L., in an exhibition game against Baltimore International League, April 18, 1919, made four home runs, Ruth facing the pitcher six times—had two bases on balls.

July 29, 1919, George Sisler, St. Louis, vs. Washington A.L., had only two putouts and one assist, only three assists made in the game; 14 putouts were made on fly balls.

No players left on bases in games in which hits were made.

NATIONAL LEAGUE—July 26, 1902, St. Louis vs. Pittsburgh, Sam Leever pitching, made one hit; September 14, 1909, Cincinnati vs. Chicago, Mordecai Brown pitching, made one hit; August 15, 1913, New York vs. St. Louis, Dayton Perritt pitching, made eight hits; October 3, 1914, Cincinnati vs. Pittsburgh, Robert Harmon pitching, made two hits; May 19, 1915, Philadelphia vs. St. Louis, Daniel Griner pitching, made two hits; September 4, 1915, Brooklyn vs. Boston, Arthur Nehf, pitching, made one hit; June 29, 1916, New York vs. Philadelphia, Eppa Rixey pitching, made four hits; August 13, 1919, New York vs. Cincinnati, Harry Sallee pitching, made three hits; September 13, 1919, Philadelphia vs. Pittsburgh, H. Carlson pitching, made two hits; October 1, 1920, Brooklyn vs. New York, P. Douglas pitching, made three hits.

AMERICAN LEAGUE—July 1, 1902, Baltimore vs. Philadelphia, G. E. Waddell pitching, made two hits; June 4, 1914, Cleveland vs. Chicago, James Scott pitching, made one hit; August 11, 1914, Chicago vs. Cleveland, Guy Morton and Fred Coumbe pitching, made three hits; August 16, 1915, Boston vs. Washington, Bert Gallia pitching, made two hits; June 2, 1917, Chicago vs. Philadelphia, L. J. Bush and F. Falkenberg pitching, made five hits; June 12, 1919, Chicago vs. Boston, Herbert Pennock pitching, made three hits.

National League games in which one team scored thirty or more runs.

July 22, 1876, Chicago 30, Louisville 7; June 29, 1897, Chicago 36, Louisville 7; July 24, 1882, Chicago 35, Cleveland 4; July 3, 1883, Chicago 31, Buffalo 7; June 18, 1893, Cincinnati 30, Louisville 12.

New York, on June 15, 1887, won over Philadelphia, 29 to 1.

Few hit games, but each hit a long one.

Seymour, New York, held St. Louis N.L. to three hits—a double, triple and home run—May 21, 1899. Ayres, Washington, held Detroit A.L. to four hits—two doubles and two triples—June 22, 1914. Leonard, Boston, held Cleveland A.L., to four hits—three doubles and a home run—September 24, 1916. Sallee, Cincinnati, held Philadelphia A.L. to three hits—two doubles and a triple—June 19, 1919.

No assists by infield, battery excluded.

A peculiar feature of the Philadelphia-Washington A.L. game of May 5, 1910, was the fact that two men on each team handled all the assists. Six assists were made by the Athletics, pitcher "Cy" Morgan and second baseman Eddie Collins getting all of them; while pitcher "Dixie" Walker and catcher Charlie Street are credited with all the assists in the Nationals' box score. Morgan aided in retiring four and Collins two of the Nationals. Walker was instrumental in disposing of five Athletics and Street three. This is probably the first time in the history of big league Baseball that the four infielders have failed to break into the assist column.

Relief pitchers retire side on strikes.

W. Johnson, Washington, relieving Gallia in the ninth inning, fanned Bush, Kavanaugh and Vitt of Detroit A.L., July 25, 1915. Coveleskie, Cleveland, relieving Lepper in the ninth inning, fanned Oldring, Schang and Stelbauer of Philadelphia A.L. in succession, June 12, 1916. E. A. Rommel, Philadelphia, relieving Scott Perry in the eighth inning, fanned G. H. Ruth, D. B. Pratt and R. Meusel of New York A.L. in succession, September 7, 1920.

Double play on attempted double steal.

F. Crossin, St. Louis, threw out Crawford, Detroit A.L., at second, and Cobb was caught trying to score from third, Pratt to Crossin; third inning, April 25, 1914. N. Allen, Cincinnati, threw out Southworth Pittsburgh N.L., at second base and Carey was caught trying to score from third, Lee Magee to Allen; sixth inning, July 4, 1918. F. O'Neill, Cleveland, threw out T. R. Cobb, Detroit A.L., at second base, and when Bush was caught trying to score from third, Wambsganss to O'Neill; fourth inning, May 4, 1920.

Eight pitchers used by one club in a single game.

A. Williams, Bentley, Griffith, Engel, Johnson, Schaefer, Ainsmith and Gedeon, Washington, pitched against Boston A.L. (Anderson alone) and won 10—9, October 1913.

Pitcher catches base-runner off first and makes putout.

Doak, St. Louis, caught Carey, Pittsburgh N.L., off first base and tagged him for a out.

An odd putout.

Haley, Philadelphia A.L., forced at second by Witt on ball that hit Pitcher Ambeth's glove and Second Baseman Wambsganss' shin, was put out by Shortstop Chapman, September 13, 1916

Scores from second base on sacrifice fly.

George Ruth, Boston, hit a tremendous fly to right which Gilhooley, New York A.L., caught up against the bleacher wall. It was such a mighty drive that Scott scored from second and Ruth got credit for a sacrifice fly. Afternoon game, April 19, 1918. Other players who have made same play: Charles Jones, Washington, on ball hit to F. Hinchman, left fielder of Cleveland A.L., by Charles Hickman, May 18, 1907; Fred Clarke, Pittsburgh, on ball hit to James Schekard, left fielder of Chicago N.L., by Hans Wagner, June 30, 1907; Tyrus Cobb, Detroit, on ball hit to R. Oldring, center fielder of Philadelphia A.L., by Sam Crawford, July 11, 1911; R. Oldring, Philadelphia, on ball hit to Bert Daniels, right fielder of New York A.L., by E. T. Collins, September 12, 1911; Bert Daniels, Cincinnati, on ball hit to Josh Devore, right fielder of Boston N.L., by Charles Herzog, August 8, 1914; Edward Foster, Washington, on ball hit to Armando Marsans, center fielder of St. Louis A.L., by Elmer Smith, May 20, 1917; Tris Speaker, Cleveland, on ball hit to Oscar Felsch, center fielder of Chicago A.L., by Robert Roth, June 30, 1917.

Outfielder makes two double plays unassisted.

Tris Speaker, Cleveland A.L., made an unassisted double play in the Cleveland-Detroit game of April 18, 1918. He trapped a fly ball in the ninth inning, ran in and tagged Vitt, who hesitated between second and third, and then stepped on the bag, forcing Ellison. Speaker duplicated this feat in the Cleveland-Chicago game of April 29.

An odd game and an unnecessary question.

In a ten-inning tie game between St. Louis and Philadelphia N.L., May 13, 191 the Cardinals got two hits in the first inning and that was all, but they were good for three runs, coupled with a base on balls. One was a homer by Cruise. After the first inning Oeschger pitched nine without allowing a hit. Someone has asked, "Does that entitle him to a no-hit game?"

Opposing catcher borrowed to finish game.

In the final game of a double-header between Louisville and Toledo, July 21, 191 Catcher Kelly of Toledo had the unusual experience of catching for both teams. Walter Meyer had been injured and Louisville was without a catcher, as Kocher had left after the first game, so Kelly was borrowed to finish the second game for the Colonels.

Two home runs in one inning by same player.

On June 10, 1880, Buffalo at Boston, C. Jones, Boston, made two home runs in the eighth, his team scoring ten times in that inning. Buffalo ran up nineteen errors. Esterbrook being the only player on the team with a clean fielding record. On May 30, 1894, Cincinnati at Boston, Robert Lowe of Boston made two home runs in the first inning, off Chamberlain, in the afternoon contest. Lowe hit four home runs in the game.

Unusual pitching feats.

W. Johnson, Washington A.L., shut out New York, September 4, 5 and 7, 1908, three days in succession, pitching 27 innings, without a run.

E. Reulbach, Chicago N.L., pitched a double-header against Brooklyn, September 26, 1908, and shut out the latter in both games.

First four years of the Boston Nationals, 1871-1875, A. G. Spalding pitched all the games.

Charles Radbourn, Providence N.L., 1884, pitched in 77 games (74 championship, world series), of which he won 63, lost 12, tied 2. From July 23 to September 2 inclusive, with the exception of August 2, 8 and 20, and September 25, Radbourn pitched every game played by Providence; total, 36 games. He won 31, lost 4 and tied 1, pitching 22 in succession and winning 18 consecutive games.

D. T. ("Cy") Young had a unique record, 22 consecutive years in major league pitched 3 no-hit games; pitched 45 innings without being scored upon.

Unusual catching feat.

W. Schriver, Chicago N.L., on August 29, 1894, on second attempt, caught a ball thrown from top of Washington Monument. Charles E. Street, catcher Washington A.L., August 28, 1908, caught a ball pitched from the window at top of Washington Monument, distance 542 feet; estimated when ball reached his hands it was traveling at a velocity of 161 feet a second. William D. Sullivan, catcher Chicago A.L. August 24, 1910, caught three balls thrown from Washington Monument.

Shortest post-season game.

1 hour 8 minutes, New York N.L. 4, New York A.L. 1, October 13, 1914.

One day's remarkable totals.

On May 11, 1911, 126 runs and 177 base hits were made in the major league. National League made 75 runs and 91 hits; American League made 51 runs and 86 hits.

Went through season without a defeat.

1916—Base Ball Players' Fraternity made further demands upon organized Base Ball for concessions to players.

1917—National League abrogated its agreement with the Base Ball Players' Fraternity.

New earned run definition added to rules.

First championship National League game played in New York City on Sunday for benefit 69th Regiment.

1918—Base Ball season terminated September 1 by order Secretary of War Baker on account of draft law.

1919—Major leagues adopted 140-game playing schedule instead of schedule of 154 games.

Sunday Base Ball permitted in New York State.

1920—Major leagues resumed schedule of 154 games.

August Herrmann resigned as chairman of National Commission.

Playing rules amended, "Forbidding pitcher to intentionally discolor ball, to treat it with any liquid or substance, to mar or cut it, to roughen it or to use the spitball, except such pitchers as were registered as regular spitball pitchers."

"Prohibiting catcher from leaving position behind plate to assist pitcher to give base on balls."

"Batsman in last half of final inning given home run if ball is batted over fence or wall."

"First game of double-header regularly scheduled game."

"Side last at bat before completion of fifth inning equal score of side first at bat in five complete innings, game drawn."

"Side second at bat makes more runs in incompleting half of fifth inning than side first at bat has made in five completed innings, game won by side second at bat."

"If substitute player's name has not been announced by umpire, plays of substitute player legal while he was in game."

"A balk if pitcher take legal position on rubber without ball in his possession."

"A balk if pitcher take position off rubber and feint to deliver ball to batter."

"Compelling pitcher after in position to keep both hands on ball except in act of delivery."

"Permitting pitcher to step from his plate to dry hands or rub eyes."

"Ball dead on balk and no play to be made until runner or runners reach bases for which entitled."

"Balk if pitcher drop ball accidentally, provided runners are on bases."

"Called ball if pitcher delivers ball while off rubber, whether ball goes fair over plate or not. If batsman strike at such ball, ruled to be a strike or whatever play may follow."

"Dead ball when ball which batter is trying to avoid hits bat accidentally."

"Fair or foul fly to be judged according to relative position of ball and foul line, and not as to whether fielder is on fair or foul ground at the time that he touches the ball."

- "Umpire to decide ball fair or foul on point where it passes over actual playing field fence."
 - "Runners permitted to be off bases or to advance at risk of infield fly being caught."
 - "Attempt to bunt resulting in fair fly ball not an infield fly."
 - "Base-runner running bases reverse way, out."
 - "Following base-runner not out if he occupies base preceding runner has left. If preceding runner returns and both are on base together, succeeding runner is out."
 - "Failure of preceding runner to touch base not to affect status of succeeding runner."
 - "Fair hit ball striking runner after passing fielder to be considered in play. Fair hit ball striking umpire on foul ground, ball in play."
 - "Thrown ball strike coacher on foul ground, ball in play."
 - "Fair hit ball going through infielder and hitting runner behind him, runner not to be called out."
 - "Ball must be firmly held to constitute putout."
 - "Base-runner holding base on caught fly ball to have right to advance moment ball touches fielder's hands."
 - "If catcher run in front of batter on squeeze play, push batter out of way, or tip his bat, balk and interference must be called."
 - "Force out exists only when runner is compelled to leave base by reason of batsman becoming base-runner."
 - "Field umpire given authority to call balk and enforce pitching rule in regard to use of foreign substances on ball."
 - "Umpire given authority to resume play after rainfall of thirty minutes."
 - "In case of injury, umpire not to call time until in his judgment no further play is possible."
 - "Batsman to be given credit for home run in last half of final inning if winning run is on bases when he makes hit out of playing field."
 - "Error to be charged against catcher if he drop third strike except on wild pitch."
 - "Error to be charged against first baseman if he fail to touch base, although having ample time to make putout."
 - "No stolen base to be credited to any runner if no effort is made to stop him."
 - "Sacrifice flies to be included among sacrifice hits."
 - "Number of runs batted in by batsman to be included in official score."
 - Rule in regard to ball being judged at point where batted over playing fence subsequently declared dead letter by both major league presidents as well as rule in regard to pitched ball accidentally hitting bat.
- New National Agreement adopted in New York City by representatives of major leagues and committee of National Association of Minor Leagues.

1921—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis elected Commissioner of Base Ball for seven years. New National Agreement ratified at meeting in Chicago.

Addenda Pacific Coast League Averages

In compiling the official Pacific Coast League averages for 1920, several records were unintentionally omitted. These additions reached the publishers too late to be incorporated in the original list, as the form containing the averages had already been printed. In order that the records may be complete the following averages should be added to the tables beginning on page 117.

PART III

College Base Ball in 1920

BY EDWARD B. MOSS, NEW YORK.

EDWARD B. MOSS.

Playing strength among the university and college Base Ball teams of the country appeared to be more evenly distributed in 1920 than was the case in the preceding season. While each section had one or more 'varsity nines which stood well to the fore, due to their ability to win games, few, if any, achieved a record which stamped them as being entitled to a ranking completely above other contenders for diamond honors in any particular section.

This was particularly noticeable in the East, where, for example, Georgetown, Navy, Penn State, Holy Cross and Lafayette were so closely grouped that the placing of one college team above the other was merely a matter of opinion and not a ranking susceptible of mathematical grading. The Navy played a total of fifteen games, of which fourteen were won and one lost. The victories included contests with Princeton, Harvard, Penn State, Army and other equally impressive rivals. The solitary defeat was in the game with Georgetown. The latter team played twenty-four games, winning twenty and losing four. Maryland, Vermont, Cornell and Fordham were the colleges to score over Georgetown, and two of the quartette were defeated in other games by the same team. Following the Cornell defeat Georgetown won seventeen games in a row and then lost the final contest of the season to Fordham, 5—2.

Records such as Georgetown and the Navy established in the college Base Ball play of 1920 would require careful analytical study and comparison to discover positive and marked difference in playing ability. The same is true of Lafayette, Holy Cross and Penn State. The former played nineteen games, winning fourteen, losing four and tying one. Virginia, Catholic University, Pennsylvania and Columbia were the only teams to triumph over Lafayette, while Virginia Military Institute held the Eastonians to a 5—5 tie in the opening game of the season. Princeton, Penn State, Cornell, Lehigh and Colgate all fell before Lafayette in addition to other less formidable combinations. Penn State won eighteen out of twenty-one games, Lafayette, Syracuse and the Navy being the only teams to defeat the State players. Victories over Swarthmore, Army, Colgate, Pittsburgh, Yale, Princeton and California were the bright spots in Penn State's schedule.

Holy Cross, the outstanding college of 1919 in the diamond game, did not quite equal its record of the preceding year when the team won twenty-two out of twenty-three games played. Its 1920 record was sixteen games won out of twenty played, including a defeat by Georgetown before the start of the regular championship schedule. There is no question regarding the all-around ability and high playing standard of the Worcester collegians during the season. The Army, Harvard, Georgetown and Yale were the only teams to check the Holy Cross nine during 1920, while Brown, Vermont, Tufts, Williams, Dartmouth and Boston College all contributed to the Worcester team's winning record. The fact that the Navy, Penn State and Lafayette did not meet Holy Cross is an illustration of the futility of attempting to give one or the other of these five teams a definite ranking over the others.

While these five teams were undoubtedly the leaders of the Eastern college Base Ball group, there were a number of other 'varsity nines which approached closely the first classification. Both Yale and Princeton played well beyond the .500 standard and the Blue had the satisfaction of winning from Princeton in the annual series. Princeton in turn won from Harvard. Other colleges which made a strong showing were Fordham, Union, Bates, Columbia, Colgate, Syracuse, Brown and Harvard. The Crimson won two out of three games from Yale, broke even with Holy Cross and California, and won from Brown and Cornell in a twenty-five game schedule which included a majority of the strongest teams of the East.

Many players of exceptional individual merit developed during the season, including Hyman and Reynolds, Georgetown pitchers; O'Connor and Maguire, infielders, and Horan, pitcher, Holy Cross; Carney and Moyer, pitchers, Lafayette; Gramley, pitcher, and Haines, outfielder, Penn State. Hyman pitched a no-hit, no-run game against Johns Hopkins and won nine of the ten games in which he engaged. Reynolds won nine out of twelve games pitched.

Gramley won eight straight contests pitching for Penn State, and the list might be lengthened almost indefinitely with Felton, Harvard; Meany, Columbia; Faherty, Yale; Lefevre, Fordham; Trimble, Princeton; Sawyer, Yale; Malone, Syracuse, and a host of others to select from.

Southern college teams also played remarkably high class Base Ball. Much the same situation prevailed in that section that existed in the East. There were a number of nines which won the large majority of their games without giving any particular evidence of superiority one over the other. Alabama Poly met some of the strongest teams of the South and finished the season with a record of sixteen games won, six lost and three tied out of a total of twenty-five. Wofford was the only college to defeat Auburn in more than a one-game series. The University of Kentucky lost three out of fourteen games, being defeated by Michigan, Cincinnati and Indiana. Virginia Military Institute scored eleven victories out of sixteen games and had one tie contest with Lafayette. Amherst, Virginia Poly, Delaware and Georgetown won from the Institute players, who, however, achieved an excellent record including a two-out-of-three series with Virginia Poly.

The latter team captured sixteen out of twenty-three games in which were included some of the best combinations of the section. West Virginia had its poorest season in several years, winning but ten games in a schedule of twenty-one. The Mountaineers won from Cornell, Fordham and Washington and Jefferson, were held on even terms by Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech and Bethany and lost to Army, Yale, Lafayette, Georgetown and Vermont. West Virginia Wesleyan won ten out of thirteen games, but the opposing teams were not the most powerful of the South. St. Mary's and Wofford colleges rolled up winning records, while the University of Tennessee, Washington and Lee, and Bethany also were prominent in the college Base Ball of the South.

In the Middle West Michigan was the winner of the Intercollegiate Conference championship. The Ann Arbor collegians played twenty-five games, winning eighteen, losing six and tying one. Teams from other sections apparently found it easier to defeat the Wolverines, for of the six games lost Alabama Poly, Vanderbilt, Georgia and California won four, although Michigan retaliated by winning in turn from all but Alabama Poly, scoring a 1—1 tie in the first of a two-game series with the Auburnites.

Ohio State University played sterling Base Ball, losing but two games out of eighteen. Michigan captured both these contests, but Purdue, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and other strong teams fell before the State combination. The University of Illinois finished the season with sixteen victories out of twenty-four games, which included a Southern trip through Mississippi and Alabama.

The University of Chicago did not play its usual Conference schedule, confining the season's activities to an interesting and successful trip to Japan. The students left Chicago in the early part of April, going to California for one game with the State University before they sailed for Japan. At the close of the Conference season the standing of the teams was as follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.	Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Michigan	9	1	.900	Indiana	2	6	.250
Ohio	8	2	.800	Purdue	2	7	.222
Illinois	6	4	.600	Wisconsin	2	10	.167
Iowa	3	2	.600

Ohio University, winning nine out of twelve games; Kalamazoo, thirteen out of fifteen; and Haskell Institute, nine out of thirteen, were other Middle West teams with creditable records. Knox College won ten games straight, although not meeting the stronger nines of the section. Muskingum College with a wider range of opponents gained nine victories in seventeen contests.

On the Pacific Coast the University of Washington, California and Stanford were the outstanding teams. Washington won eleven out of fourteen games, taking three out of four from Oregon Aggies; four straight from Oregon; two straight from Washington State, and breaking even with California and Stanford. Stanford played twenty-two games, winning ten, losing eleven and tying one. The University of California played a long schedule of forty-two games, which included an Eastern trip in which the leading college teams of the Rocky Mountain, Middle West and Atlantic Coast sections were met. Out of this long list the Californians won twenty-seven games and lost fifteen.

The University of Montana was one of the best combinations in the Rocky Mountain district, losing but twice in a schedule of sixteen games. Idaho and Washington State each managed to win one game from the Missoula students, but were defeated decisively in the series. In the Southwest, Southwestern University and the University of Texas made the best records. Southwestern won eleven out of seventeen games, breaking even in a two-game series with Texas. The latter team won sixteen out of twenty-four games. Of the seven games lost, two were won by professional clubs. The St. Louis Americans won, 11—8; Chicago Americans, 2—1, and San Antonio of the Texas League was held to a 6—6 tie.

COLLEGE BASE BALL IN IOWA

BY SEC TAYLOR, DES MOINES, IOWA.

Many of the schools of Iowa had Base Ball teams in 1920, and most of them enjoyed successful seasons. The State University of Iowa, Iowa State College, Drake University, Coe College, University of Dubuque, Columbia College, Simpson College, Morningside College, Luther College, Upper Iowa University, St. Ambrose College and State Teachers' College put teams in the field.

Iowa, which finished in a tie with Illinois for third place in the Western Conference, was the only team in the state undefeated by an Iowa nine, and was generally regarded as the state school champion. Iowa defeated Coe twice, Upper Iowa and Ames. The second game between the latter team and the Hawkeyes was canceled after a dispute over the rules, Ames contending that under Missouri Valley Conference rules its pitcher should be allowed to throw the spitball. Ames had a strong team, which finished second in the Valley Conference, being Washington's closest competitor for the championship and losing only two games to state schools, one to Iowa and one to Drake.

Luther College had a splendid team, played a heavy schedule and shut out its opponents in 43 consecutive innings. It won eight games, lost three and tied one, its defeats being by Dubuque, Macalester and Upper Iowa. Luther, however, defeated each of these teams in other games. Coe's team was below its usual standard, its only victory being over Drake. The latter also had a poor season, but had the satisfaction of breaking even with Ames, Missouri and Kansas. It lost four to Washington, two to the Kansas Aggies and Morningside, and one to Coe. Morningside played a short schedule of seven games, losing only one and that to Ames. Among its victims were South Dakota, Simpson and Drake. Upper Iowa's team won eight games and lost two, one of the defeats being by Iowa and the other by Luther, which was beaten in a later game. Rain and cold weather played havoc with a heavy schedule arranged by Upper Iowa, only six contests being played. Three of these were defeats by Dubuque and Upper Iowa, the latter winning twice. Simpson, Dubuque, Columbia and St. Ambrose put out teams but played only short schedules, weather conditions last spring being bad for college Base Ball. All of the schools which had teams will be back in the field in 1921, as the sport is one of the most attractive for the athlete. It has been found that many young men who develop into splendid track, foot ball and basket ball players will go to a college which has a Base Ball team, for the game on the diamond is the sport that affords the player most fun in actual competition and in practice.

MICHIGAN INTERCOLLEGIATE A.A.

BY RALPH N. YOUNG.

Kalamazoo swept through the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association, playing eleven games and losing none. Albion was easily second in the Association in twelve games, winning seven and losing five, and Alma was third with five victories in eleven contests. Appended also is a selection of an All-Michigan Intercollegiate Base Ball squad for 1920.

New York School Champions Defeat Chicago

The Base Ball nine of High School of Commerce defeated Flushing High and Commercial High of Greater New York and thus won the championship of the Greater New York Public Schools Athletic League. Lane Technical High of Chicago won the championship of the Public Schools Athletic League of Chicago and challenged the High School of Commerce. The challenge was accepted and the game was played June 26 in Chicago and was won by the High School of Commerce. Superior pitching in the pinches and fine support in the field gave the New Yorkers a 12-6 victory. The game was played at the Chicago National League park.

Walsh started in the box for Lane and wildness got him into trouble right off the reel. Ryrholm replaced him in the sixth and held the New Yorkers until the ninth. With the bases full in that inning, Gehrig, nicknamed "Babe Ruth" by his teammates, lifted a long fly over the screen in right field, hereby living up to his nickname. It was his first hit of the game, and cleared the screen by twenty feet. Jacobs pitched a clever game for New York, although hit hard in spots. His control was splendid. The score:

JERSEY CITY INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE.

JERSEY CITY INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE

The Jersey City Industrial League, organized April 1, 1920, is the outgrowth of the Lafayette League. Commissioner of Parks and Public Property A. Harry Moore, affectionately known as the "Father of Athletics" in Jersey City, a man who has done more to promote athletics and look after the welfare of the boys and young men than any other man in New Jersey, created the position of Director of Industrial Recreation and appointed Edw. E. Dillon, who was organizer and president of the Lafayette League, to fill his position. Beginning April 1, Dillon organized thirty-eight teams, dividing them into four leagues from the different sections of the city. Of the thirty-eight factories, ten only previously had Base Ball teams. These teams played throughout the season.

When the play-off for the championship was held, the stands and ground were filled to capacity. The Atlantic & Pacific team won and were awarded the championship at a banquet. In October, Manager Willard Stanton of the Chamber of Commerce, who was heart and soul in the enterprise from the start, took over the league as one of the Chamber's activities and named Dillon to continue as Director. The final standing of the teams follows:

TYDOL CLUB, BAYONNE, N. J.

The Tydol Base Ball Club, representing the Tide Water Oil Company, played remarkable ball during the season of 1920 and defeated most of the leading industrial teams in New Jersey. The Tydols also scored victories over some of the widely known semi-pro clubs playing in and around New York City. Of twenty-five games played, only one was a defeat.

ERIE RAILROAD ALL STARS

The Erie All Stars, representing the Athletic Association of the Erie Railroad Company, won 23 of 35 games which were played during the season of 20. Theirs was unquestionably the strongest team on the Erie Railroad stem. They played at Port Jervis, Paterson, N. J.; Haverstraw, N. Y.; Corry, Pa., and Jamestown, N. Y., during the season, and all of their games were well contested, whether they won or lost. Only two extra-inning games were played in the season. The first of these was lost to the Riverside Field Club, 3—2, and the second was won by the Erie All Stars, 6—4. Twice the All Stars played 1—0 games and won both of them, the first at Corry, Pa., and the second at Peekskill, N. Y. The scores of the games follow:

-Port Jervis A.C. 6	17—Corry A.C. 4	3—Victory A.C. 2

MOTOR CAR LEAGUE, NEW YORK CITY

The Detroit Cadillac Motor Car Company's nine won the championship of the Motor Car League, New York City, with a fine percentage of .800, having won 12 out of 15 games. The Oakland team, Cadillac's strongest rivals, finished second. The final standing of the Motor Car League was as follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.	Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.

NEWARK BANKING AND INSURANCE LEAGUE

The Base Ball team representing the National Newark & Essex Banking Company in the Newark Banking and Insurance League won the pennant in close race. Atlee Brown and Federal Trust Company finished second and third, respectively, in the league race, both teams keeping well up with the leaders throughout the season. The National Newarkers won sixteen out of seventeen games. Much of this success was due to the masterly pitching of Edy Kugelman, captain of the nine, who won every game he pitched for the bankers and has the distinction of a no-hit, no-run game to his credit. The standing of the league at the close of the season follows:

Club.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.	Club.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
1—Newark & Essex.....	16	2	.888	Fidelity Trust Co.....	8	10	.444

EASTMAN KODAK LEAGUE, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Eastman Kodak Base Ball League, composed of one team from each of the six Rochester branches of the Eastman Kodak Company, finished the 1920 season with two teams, Hawk-Eye and Camera Works, tied for first place. This happened at the close of the 1919 season. In the 1920 play-off the tables were reversed and the Hawk-Eyes won the pennant from the Camera Works. The Hawk-Eye team then challenged the Art In Buttons line, holders of the I.A.R.A. championship, for a three-game series for the city title. This series was won by the Hawk-Eyes in two games. The Hawk-Eye record for the 1920 season is 15 victories out of 18 games. The scores were as follows:

—Premo 0	3—Camera Works 4	3—Kodak Park 7
1—Camera Works 4	5—Kodak Park 4	9—Folmer-Century 0
—Kodak Park 7	6—Main Office 2	9—Main Office 0

DETROIT INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE

By H. G. JOHNSON, SECRETARY RECREATION DIRECTOR.

Since its organization in 1917 by Judge Ira W. Jayne, then City Superintendent of Recreation, the Detroit Industrial Base Ball League has grown from twenty-four to forty-eight teams, the last in 1920, with six hundred and twenty-three players taking part in five or more games. Much credit is due Floyd J. Williams, Welfare Director of the Detroit Steel Products Company, for its success.

The League is maintained on a strictly amateur basis by the rigid enforcement of three fundamental rules, which are:

1. Every player must be a bona fide employe of the company on whose team he is playing.
2. No player shall receive any remuneration whatsoever for his services as a ball player.
3. There are no releases. Any player who appears in the line-up of any team is barred for the remainder of the season if he leaves the employ of that company.

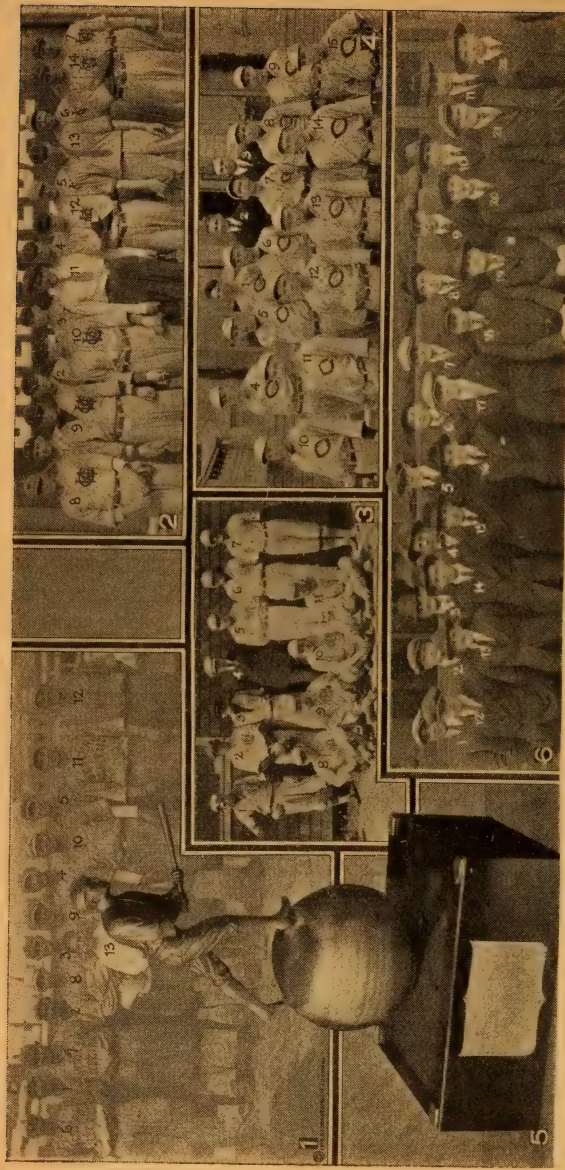

The 1920 season was officially opened May 5, with the forty-eight teams playing in six divisions, and closed August 14. Following this, the six pennant winners were organized into a league to decide the city industrial championship. The championship was won by the team representing the Solvay Process Company. The final standing of the divisions follow:

MINNEAPOLIS MUNICIPAL ASSOCIATION

BY W. H. FOX, DIRECTOR MUNICIPAL ATHLETICS.

A large enrollment of clubs, spirited competition, a high standard of play, city-wide interest, record attendance and favorable weather were contributing factors in the successful season achieved by the Minneapolis Municipal Base Ball Association in 1920. Sixty-nine clubs, representing a thirty per cent increase in membership over 1919, made up the roster of the Association. These were classified in eleven divisions. One thousand five hundred and eighty players competed, and schedules were drawn for 406 games and executed on the various diamonds throughout the park system. Thirty efficient umpires officiated, and maximum co-operation was received from the park police in the management of the record attendance, numbering 425,000 persons. Over 6,000 recreational permits were issued by the department, and approximately 75,000 persons played Base Ball and kindred games under Park Board supervision.

The Base Ball season was auspiciously opened on May 8 with an elaborate automobile parade, headed by the Firemen's Municipal Band and Mayor J. E. Meyers and public officials. The Mayor announced that he would donate to the Association a trophy for Base Ball, which would be first awarded to the Wilcox Trux for winning the Mid-West championship in 1919. This trophy was made by A. G. Spalding & Bros. of Minneapolis and especially designed by the Recreation Department. The specifications comprised a mahogany base, 6 inches high and 12 inches square. On the four sides scenes are artistically engraved depicting the representation of Minneapolis in four prominent attributes of the city—recreational activity, milling industry and composite manufacturing and transportation. The mahogany base is crowned with a silver plate, disclosing a fully equipped Base Ball diamond. In the center of the plate, slightly imbedded, rests a silver Base Ball, representing the essential equipment of the game. Astride the ball in graceful yet aggressive poise stands a figure in batting action, representing the physical aspect of the national sport. The trophy is to remain in competition for eight years, and the club winning it five times in the eight years will permanently retain it.

In the Manufacturing Division of the Commercial League, Western Electric forged to the front and won the championship in the last game of the season. In the Millers' and Bankers' Division, Washburn-Crosby Co. captured the honors, which were hotly contested by Shevlin Carpenter and Federal Reserve Bank. Munsingwear won the pennant in the Industrial Division. In the play-off Washburn-Crosby eliminated Munsingwear, but was defeated by Western Electric for the championship of the Commercial League. In the City League, the Silver Bows won in the American Division, while N. E. Merchants won in the National Division. In the play-off the Bows lost to the Merchants for the dual championship of both divisions. In the Junior League, the Buffaloes, Bottineau, Powderhorn, Windom, Nicollet and Eagle A.C. won pennants in their respective divisions.

In the final series Western Electric and N. E. Merchants engaged for the city championship, which was won by Western Electric.

During the season an all-star team, bearing the emblem of the Recreational Department of the Board, played a seven-game series in Winnipeg and Brandon, Manitoba, Canada, winning 5 and losing 2. A return series was later played in Minneapolis, and the Transconas, representing the Winnipeg Association, were defeated by Western Electric.

MISSION LEAGUE OF CALIFORNIA

After a lapse of three years, the Mission League in California was reorganized in 1920 with six clubs—San Jose, Hollister, Gilroy, Watsonville, Salinas and Monterey. Although not a member of the National Association, the Mission League worked in co-operation with the Pacific Coast League. At the beginning of the season a rule was adopted that no player under contract, or suspended by any club in organized ball, was eligible to play in the league. This rule was the cause of the league being reorganized July 19. The Salinas club had signed Frank Juney of the Portland club of the Pacific Coast League. Juney was ruled ineligible and the Salinas club withdrew from the league, King City taking its place.

Gilroy won the first half season and Hollister the second half. A post-season series of five games was played for the championship, Hollister winning three games and Gilroy two. Hollister won each of the three games by one run and each in the last inning. In the post-season series larger crowds than ever witnessed the games. As Gilroy and Hollister each had won two games in the series, the fifth and deciding game was played on neutral grounds at Watsonville. Chauncey Tramutola, a former Mission League star, presented gold watch fobs to the members of the pennant-winning Hollister club, and A. G. Spalding & Bros. gave a cup and pennant to the winners.

Credit for the successful season is due President James J. Nealon, who has been identified with semipro Base Ball for the past twenty years. He was ably assisted by Vice-President A. W. Cox of Gilroy and Secretary F. W. Ruppert of Watsonville.

SPALDING JUNIOR "PLAYERS' AUTOGRAPH" No. 150J BAT

No. 150J. Endorsed by J. B. Sheridan, the originator of the "Boys' Size Base Ball Diamond." Best quality selected ash. Each, $1.50

If you have any particular model of bat which you wish made up or an old bat that you want duplicated, special attention will be given to your order if complete specifications are sent to any A. G. SPALDING & BROS. Store, accompanied by the price, $3.50. The bat will be made and finished according to your specifications. If the old bat is sent it should be expressed, charges prepaid, with your name and address on the package, and also on tag attached to bat. If only measurements are sent, special care should be used in drawing the bat on a blank sheet of paper, giving the exact shape of the bat with measurements around different parts and the length and the approximate weight. At least five ounces variation in weight must be allowed for difference in density of timber.

We require at least two weeks' time for the execution of special bat orders.

We do not guarantee bats against breaking,

Spalding "Official Olympic" Athletic Implements

A. G. SPALDING & BROS. have been authorized officially to use this stamp on Spalding athletic implements made in accordance with International Amateur Athletic Federation specifications. Implements to be recognized as official, for use in any future Olympic Games, must bear the official I. A. A. F. stamp as shown. Spalding implements are not only officially recognized by the governing athletic bodies of the whole world, but the adoption of "actual use" by every athlete of prominence in either club, college or school competition, is accorded them because of superiority of construction over the implements made by any other concern.

The complete equipment for the Olympic Games stadium at Antwerp, 1920, was furnished by A. G. Spalding & Bros.' London house, through their local representatives in Belgium, Charles Bunyan & Sons of Brussels.

OLYMPIC GAMES—1920

Records and Pictures

The revival of the Olympic Games probably has done more to stimulate interest in athletics than any other feature of athletic competition. Each succeeding Olympiad sees interest increasing and a desire to know what has been accomplished. Every follower of track and field sport, every school and library, should have a copy of this book for reference. No other publication gives the results with as much detail and accuracy. Not only are track competition and swimming included but the final results in all events of the Olympic programme of 1920. . . . Price, 25 CENTS

SPALDING'S ATHLETIC ALMANAC

What the Base Ball Record is to the national game, the Athletic Almanac is to track and field. Invaluable for everyone who would be familiar with the latest records in running, jumping, walking, weight throwing and swimming. Illustrated. . . . Price, 25 CENTS

A.A.U. OFFICIAL HANDBOOK

To receive recognition as "official" records certain formalities must be followed exactly. The A.A.U. Official Handbook tells what course to pursue, tells the duties of the various officials at an athletic meet, contains directions for organizing athletic clubs and gives other information concerning the organization. . . . Introduction

IN SPALDING'S OFFICIAL BASE BALL RECORD for 1921 the editor prefaced the introduction by the statement that the season of 1920 would always be known as the "Year of New Records." For this issue for 1922 it is but proper to supplement the previous statement with another that the season of 1921 will always be known as the "Year of More New Records."

George Herman Ruth, who set a mark for home runs in 1920 that seemed to be unapproachable, surpassed his own record in 1921. The batting of the season was heavier and more effective than it had been for years in professional Base Ball. The world series was at last played by two New York clubs. New records were made in the series.

The demands for the BASE BALL RECORD, which will ever be known as the "Little Red Book" in Base Ball, thanks to the thoughtful christening by the Base Ball writers who certainly gave it a happy title in a jocose moment, multiply annually. There is no compendium of fact in the world which gives so much historical information in regard to the national game.

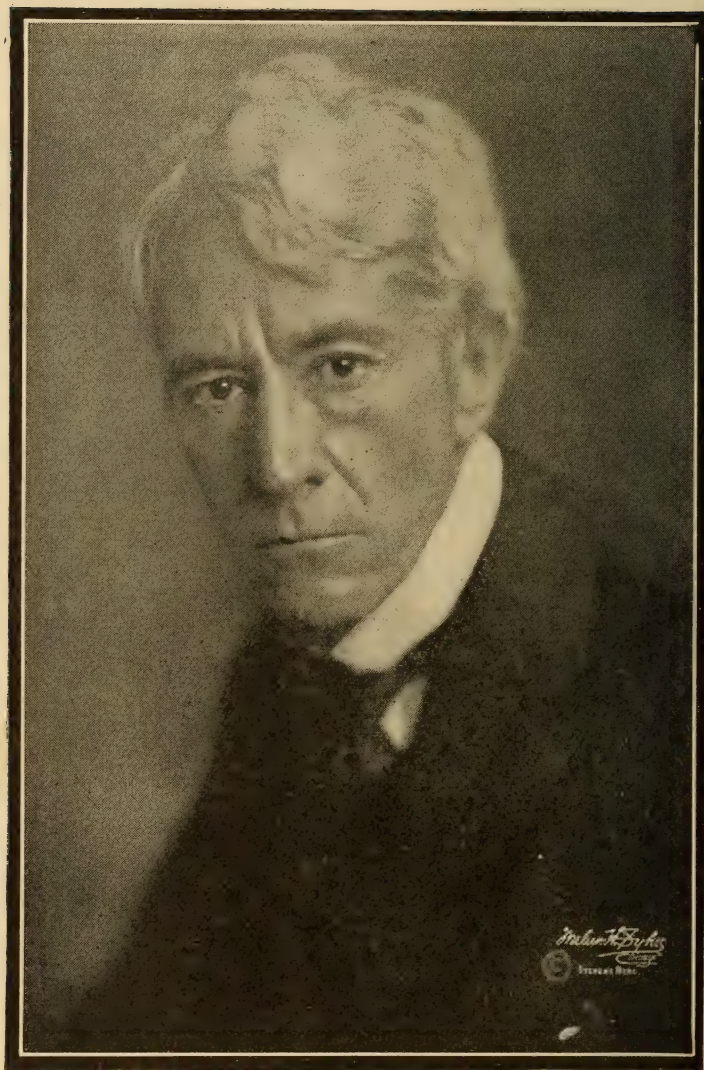

In this year's edition there are complete reports from the minor leagues, a statistical report of the world series, the "averages" of the major leagues and the special features for which the RECORD is famous, with added compilations which have been found of assistance to the writers on the national game. Attention is called to the table of acceptances of infield chances, which will give an idea of the ground-covering ability of the players during the summer. A summary of all world series games has been arranged which is the most elaborate new statistical feature of recent years.

Correction has been made of some errors that had come down from former years. For instance, the Chicago National League club's total of home runs has been definitely traced to 140. George Cutshaw did not accept the most chances at third base. That result came from a typographical error. It is not Ravath who holds the National League home run record, but Sam Thompson.

To those who have added to the information in the BASE BALL RECORD by sending notes of unusual happenings and by calling attention to events which have come under their notice, the publishers and the editor extend thanks. Of those who have cheerfully assisted in this task are E. J. Lanigan, Charles V. Mears, L. Gettelson, B. H. Swales, Al Munro Elias, John V. Reger, Malcolm Kennedy and Francis C. Richter. The more accurate that the "Little Red Book" can become year from year, the better. It was a problem beyond belief to verify Base Ball records from the start, and many a presumable one fell by the wayside upon examination.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLAYERS IN THE SPALDING BASE BALL
HALL OF FAME.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

The commanding figure in the National League Hall of Fame for 1921 is that of Rogers Hornsby. The St. Louis second baseman, who led the batters of 1920, leads them again in 1921, and in addition to being the best batsman in the National League excels in other ways as a ballplayer. His superior attainments have qualified him not only for the leadership in batting, but for an enviable place in other demands for physical proficiency. In 1921 Hornsby played in five more games than he played in 1920. His total of games for the season was 154. In these he made 235 hits as against 218 the year before. Of the 235 hits, 152 were singles, 44 were doubles, 18 were three-baggers and 21 were home runs. In addition to being the leading batter he was also the leader in making the most hits and was the best two-base hitter, in both of which he excelled in 1920. His newer successes were found in scoring the most runs, crowding George Burns of the Giants out of that honor. He also batted home the most runs and tied with Powell as the best batter of three-baggers. He narrowly missed tying Kelly of the Giants for the most home runs, as Hornsby had 21 to 23 for the first baseman of the New York team. A wonderful individual record for one season! Nor was this all, as he finished the year with a batting average of .397 as against the .370 which he made in the previous campaign. It is true that he had five more games in which to improve on some of his records, but it is as easy to lose in playing five added games as it is to win, so Hornsby must be given credit for extending his best endeavor throughout the year in a longer campaign.

Without doubt Hornsby is the player of the National League who most nearly approximates Ruth in the American League. He does not possess the overwhelming drive by which Ruth makes his home runs with such frequency, but he meets the ball fully as often, and his effectiveness is not to be denied when there are hits and runs needed by his team.

The player who made the most single base-hits in the National League in 1921 was Bigbee of Pittsburgh. It is the first time that he has come forward as a contestant for one of the places in the Hall of Fame. He ousted Stock from the honor of making the most hits, a distinction which Stock held in the previous year, but he did not retire Stock from the Hall of Fame, because the St. Louis third baseman leads all of the batters in the National League in making sacrifice hits in 1921, a record which was held the previous year by George Cutshaw, the Pittsburgh veteran. While Cutshaw was retired from the Hall of Fame it is worthy of note that he never batted as well in his Base Ball career as he did for Pittsburgh in 1921. With an average of .340 he was well up with the leaders, as he was sixteenth on the list and only a little below Frisch, one of the best of the season's batters. Hornsby made eighteen three-baggers and so did Powell of Boston, and they divide that honor between them.

The National League's best home run hitter was Kelly of New York with 3 to his credit. It is a wide range from the 59 of Ruth to the 23 of Kelly, but do not be chary in granting Kelly praise for all that. Remember that it was not so very long ago that a record of 23 home runs in one season would have been accounted a little short of marvelous, and here was a young player who had been adjudged to be a failure without reason, as he had always shown strong points on the field and at bat, finally pulling through and establishing a record which was well worth while.

In stolen bases there is a race which has made its appearance for the first time. Frisch of the Giants has distanced all of the old chaps who were wont to hold the stolen base record as regularly as the season came to a finish. He did not steal as many bases as some of the experts of old—in reality his total seems very slender compared with figures that were made in the past—but he far exceeded any other player in the National League.

There are new faces among the leaders in fielding. Holke is the premier first baseman. Grimm, who held the supremacy in 1920, gave him a hard race all through the season, but Holke was better by three points with .997 to .994 for the Pittsburgh player. Fonseca of Cincinnati tied Grimm, but played in only sixteen games at first base, so it was in reality a race between Holke and Grimm, with the Boston first baseman a winner in the last week. The leading second baseman in 1921 was Bohne of Cincinnati. In his first year in the league he fielded the fraction of a decimal better than Ford of Boston. It was a close race between them. Ford played more games at second base than Bohne, but both of them played in more than 100 contests.

At third base it is impossible to dislodge Deal of Chicago. For three successive years he has been the leader of National League players for the Hall of Fame. In 1921 his margin of leadership was much wider than it had been in previous seasons. Seventeen points are between him and the player next behind him—Barnhart of Pittsburgh. Frisch, by far the showiest of all the National League third basemen, was far down in the list of performers when the players were measured by averages; in fact, was outstripped by Rapp, who was permitted to go to Philadelphia. Yet the great ground covering ability of Frisch is excellently defined when it is found that he had nearly as many assists at third base in fewer games than Deal, who leads the league. The mistakes of Frisch cost him heavily, because his misplays pulled down what otherwise would have been a very high record.

There is a new face at shortstop with Charles J. Hollocher of the Chicago club at the top. Ford of Boston played shortstop for the last 33 games of the year, but it would not be fair to award him the leadership against Hollocher, who played in 137 games. So far as that goes it has been the custom to give the record to a player who participated in at least fifty games, and where the separation in points might be very slight the record would always go to the player who had taken part in the greatest number of games as a simple matter of reward for hard work. The leading outfielder of the year is also new to the Hall of Fame. Flack of Chicago earned the distinction in 1921 and it is something well earned, too, as Flack, when he first began in major league Base Ball, did not have the reputation for excellent fielding which has since been earned by hard and sincere work.

In the battery department Schmidt of Pittsburgh has the place in the Hall of Fame as catcher for 1921. It is generally agreed that he is one of the very superior catchers of the National League, which is not possessed of so many that it can afford to lose any of them. Schmidt caught more than one hundred games in 1921 with a percentage of .986. He had two passed balls during the season.

The leading pitcher as a felder is an honor that is shared by too many to make it worth while to single out for distinction. It was abandoned for that reason. Some pitchers have so few fielding chances that it is not worth while to bother with them. The leading pitcher on the basis of earned runs was Doak of St. Louis, who gains that distinction for the first time in his Base Ball experience. He has been a hard worker and finally has come to his reward. Yet he was batted for more than two and one-half earned runs per game, a result much different from the one and one-half earned runs per game which happened some years ago. It seems strange to think that not a player of the National League could get within the margin of two full earned runs, yet such was the case. The actual figures for Doak were 2.58. From there they ran all the way to 6.98.

The leading pitcher on percentage of games won and lost, or rather the leading pitchers, were Adams and Glazner of Pittsburgh, each of whom won 14 games and lost five with a percentage of .737. That is a great "teaming up." On the one hand is Adams, the veteran of the league, and on the other Glazner, just beginning. To Adams it is a fit result that he should still hold his own with the best in spite of his long service as a pitcher, while to the youngster it is a most unusual distinction to win first place in his very first complete season as a major league player.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Old faces again are portrayed in the Hall of Fame of the American League or 1921. It is the reward of their owners for excellent work on the diamond and there are some men old in service for the junior league who seem fit to go forward and make records and surpass their rivals as if they had not served a long period of activity on the ball field.

The great feat that was accomplished in the American League in 1921 was that by a ballplayer of one of the Western teams—Heilmann of Detroit—who won the batting championship in a fight that was conducted against two of the best batters in the history of the game, and to succeed against such rivals is an achievement of surpassing worth. All through the year Heilmann had a battle with his rivals, Cobb and Sisler. The latter did not get the best start, but when he had regained his normal skill he became dangerous. Cobb was in the thick of the fight all of the way.

Not even the fact that Babe Ruth was conducting his personal campaign to surpass Babe Ruth's own home run record could withdraw all attention from the effort that was being made by Heilmann to win the batting championship of his organization. It was too good a fight to be overlooked. While New York exulted in the home run drives that were lifted by the powerful swing of the champion into the bleachers and over the fences of the various fields, Detroit was as much aroused over the standing of Heilmann as a batter.

The Detroit outfielder started the season at a pace that was astounding, even though there were others who were batting above their normal ability. He not only displayed an average of .500 as a reward for his effort but he seemed to have little or no trouble to keep up to .500 for quite a period. It was expecting too much of any ballplayer, unless there is some day to be a superman, to continue indefinitely at that rate, a base-hit in every two times at bat, and at length his figures dropped back to the zone between .400 and .500. Even then Heilmann drifted down the hill slowly. He made a great effort every day to maintain his own against pitchers who improved their skill as the season wore on.

For almost all the summer he was .400 or above, and that of itself will rank him as one of the most powerful batters of the American League circuit, because players who can hit up to .400 have become fewer and fewer.

That was not all that he did to celebrate his advent among the remarkable batters of the game. He made a total of 237 hits, which is something very welcome to any manager who is fighting for a Base Ball championship. The players who can make 200 hits in one season are not plentiful.

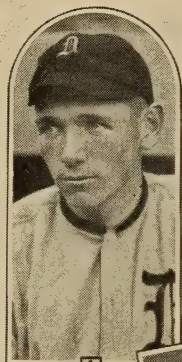

Babe Ruth was at it again in 1921. That's rather literal and not a bit sentimental, but the truth. He started out to surpass his home record of 1920 and he did so. The ability of Ruth to make home runs is not equaled by any other ballplayer, and whether there will ever be another like him is something that none of us knows. The most vivid imagination would not have predicted his record of 54 home runs in 1920, and an imagination that would have predicted a repetition of the feat with added home runs thrown in for good measure might have been regarded as bordering a little on the unsound; yet Ruth did go over 54 with a total of 59.

Not only did Ruth lead in making home runs with a total that is all his, but he batted in more runs than any other player of the American League, and he scored more runs than any other player. He always had his own private little total of 59 home runs to help him out in both respects.

Of the other batters of the American League, Tobin of St. Louis is honored because he made more single hits than any of his rivals. His total was 179 and that of Heilmann was 161. Tobin is a good bunter, and naturally that helped him in making singles. His speed also assisted him in beating out hits to the infield.

The most sacrifice hits were made by Wambsganss of Cleveland, who for two years has acted the part of good Samaritan in the batting order of the Cleveland club by his ability to move runners along who were in front of him.

Of the long distance hitters, Speaker again led the league in making doubles. It is a specialty of his. It seems to have dated from that famous double which he made in 1912, when he played an important part in beating the Giants out of the world series against the Boston team. He made 52 two-baggers in 1921, as against 50 in 1920. The best batter for three-baggers was Shanks of Washington, who brought the honor to the East.

Of the pitchers the leader in earned run percentage, which is the recognized test of good pitching, was Faber of Chicago. He could not keep within the limit of not to exceed two earned runs per game. His figure for 1921 was 2.48. A measure of his skill and of the general effectiveness of the pitching in the league for 1921 is best had by comparing Faber's performance with that of Shawkey in 1920. The latter led the American League in 1920 with 2.46. When only two hundredths separate the leading pitchers of a major organization in two successive seasons it is safe enough to figure that the quality of pitching was about alike in both campaigns, and it was. Although the batting was heavier in general in 1921 it will be found that much of it was against pitchers who had got beyond the zenith of their ability or pitchers who had yet to make their reputations. The best pitcher of the won and lost average was Mays, with a percentage of .750. Bagby of Cleveland led in 1920 with .721 and Mays proved to be a much better winner than his rival of the preceding year.

In base running, Sisler of the St. Louis team led the League with the pitiful total of 35 stolen bases. In 1920 Rice of Washington had 63. Nothing gives better evidence of the supineness of base-running in the American League in 1921. It is a falling off which is a tacit confession that base stealing is becoming a lost art.

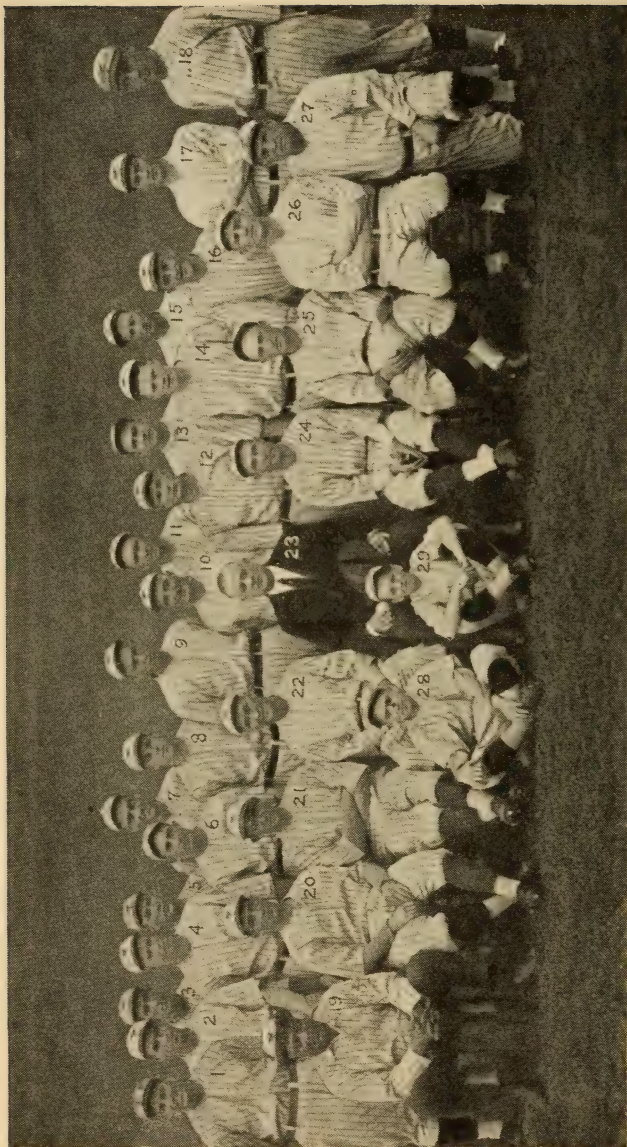

In the fielding department of the game four faces reflect the sterling ability of four players. The Hall of Fame infield of 1920 was made up of McInnis, Boston, first base; Eddie Collins, Chicago, second base; Scott, Boston, shortstop, and Vitt, Boston, third base. That is also the Hall of Fame infield for 1921.

First of all, at first is McInnis, with his wonderful record of only a single error for the season, and a fielding percentage of .999. While Babe Ruth is establishing home run records for one season after another, McInnis seems bent upon making records at first base that can be surpassed only by absolute perfection. Eddie Collins was supreme at second base, as he has been supreme in other years at the position, and in spite of the many seasons that he has played in major league organizations, to-day he sets the pace for all younger rivals by the certainty of his work. Scott at short was a part of the Boston machine for so long that Boston will scarcely know what to do without him. Not only is his record for playing shortstop one of the almost unapproachable things of Base Ball so far as the performances of players are concerned, but his record for constant service in consecutive games is superior to that of any ballplayer in either league. He is almost the embodiment of perpetual motion. Vitt did not play in as many games at third base as some of the other third basemen of the American League, but he did play in over fifty, and fifty games has been established as the standard for recognition annually in the Hall of Fame.

Of the catchers, Walters of Boston leads with a fielding percentage of .990 in 54 games. Schalk led in 1920 and in 1921 he caught in many more games than Walters, but on the fifty-game basis Walters is entitled to the distinction. He is a good young catcher and one who is progressing rapidly toward the top in his organization.

The leading outfielder of the league is Speaker of Cleveland. There were outfielders with clean records, but none of them played in enough games to warrant giving them the supremacy over the veteran player-manager, whose work in 1921 was no whit less skillful and able than it has been since his acceptance as one of Base Ball's greatest athletes.

The American League Hall of Fame would afford a wonderful nucleus for a Base Ball team in 1922 with Faber and Mays as pitchers, Walters as a catcher, an infield of McInnis, Collins, Scott and Vitt, and such batters as Hellmann, Ruth, Speaker, Shanks, Tobin, Sisler and Wambsganss. The Hall of Fame selections unquestionably show great individual merit on the part of the players of the past year.

For the first time since 1905, though with opportunities in other years to win, the New York National League club was successful against an American League rival in a world series. It so happened that its American League rival was also its local rival—the New York American League club. All games, therefore, were played on the Polo Grounds and the metropolis, for the first time in history subsequent to the adoption of the new world series rules in 1905, enjoyed a monopoly of world series contests. Financially and artistically the series was very successful. The total receipts exceeded those of any world series.

As in 1920 the series was to have extended to nine games, the team winning the first five to be the winner of the series. Eight games were played, the Giants winning their necessary fifth game before a total of nine games was necessary.

It was a more closely played series than that of 1920 and the element of luck was more conspicuous than in any world series contests since those of 1912. In the latter the New York National League club was one of the contestants, losing the series of 1912 because of errors in the decisive game. In 1921 errors in two games decided the series in favor of the New York National League club and thus the law of averages equalized history after a duration of nine years. With the series three-all, two damaging misplays on their opponents' infield gave the New York National League club the tying and winning runs in the seventh game. On the following day, when the New York National League Club was one game in the lead, its title to the series was clinched when the only run of the game resulted through the missing of a grounder by the American League shortstop, Peckinpaugh. It was not a particularly difficult chance to handle. It was one of those plays which just happen and which often have more to do with championships and champions than the most skillful playing in threescore of other games.

The pitchers in the world series of 1921 will stand forth more conspicuously than any other players. In spite of the excessive batting of the season the batting in the world series was very tame except in one game. The predominance of the pitchers emphasizes that fact amazingly, because it had been predicted that the batting of the world series of 1921 possibly would be in excess of that of other years. Not the best pitching, but the most sensational work, was that of Barnes of the New York National League club. Winner of two games, he was not selected by his manager to start in either. He relieved the faltering Toney both times and both times won for his club by courage and good control. The best pitching was that of Hoyt, the youngest of the pitchers engaged, who won two of his games and who was scored upon but twice in the series. Unfortunately for him, one of the two runs lost the decisive game. He should have won all three that he pitched. Next to Hoyt came Douglas of the New York National League club, who was not quite so effective technically as his younger rival but who won twice, once because the luck of the game broke his way when Mays floundered in the treacherous going trying to field a bunt hit by Snyder. Third among the pitchers was Mays, who was also the most unfortunate in respect to luck. His pitching was fine enough to have won three times for him. In addition to losing a game by his own loss of a bunt hit he was the victim of a bad fielding play in his third engagement, exactly as Hoyt was overwhelmed in his third contest. Much the best game pitched by Nehf was the eighth and last game of the series. The work of the other pitchers did not rise above the commonplace.

It was the first series to be presided over by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, Commissioner of Base Ball, who was present at each of the contests. The game of Saturday was postponed by him because of a severe rainstorm which rendered the field and the stands impossible to be occupied. The fourth game of the series was played on Sunday for that reason, instead of on Saturday, as originally scheduled. The only punishment visited upon a player during the series was a fine imposed upon Smith of the New York National League club to the amount of $200 for conduct unbecoming a ballplayer.

The games in detail will be published in the 1922 edition of SPALDING'S OFFICIAL BASE BALL GUIDE. In this issue of the RECORD the scoring of runs in each contest will be described.

FIRST GAME, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5.

The management of the Giants surprised many of the closer followers of Base Ball by deciding to begin the series with Douglas as pitcher. It had been generally predicted and believed that the honor would fall to Nehf. As events proved, it was a wiser plan to start with Douglas than with Nehf. The latter did not recuperate as readily as Douglas. There was not a great deal from which to choose the merits of pitching as it was served by these players, but Douglas is more rugged and lasted through the series without any falling off in his work. He was better toward the finish of his third and last game than at any time in which he pitched.

That Mays would start for the New York American League club had been quite generally assumed. He pitched a better game than Douglas. The New York Nationals were not able to score against Mays. They had two excellent opportunities and two fair opportunities and could take advantage of none. A base hit in the first inning would have scored a run for them, but Mays made a beautiful stop of Young's line drive and threw the batter out. Frisch began the fourth with a single and stole second and died at third. Peckinpaugh knocked down Young's hard hit in the sixth with Frisch on third and two out. Frisch began the ninth with a hit and was forced out at second.

The game began auspiciously for the New York American League club. Miller, the first batter, hit safely to center field. Peckinpaugh followed with a sacrifice and Ruth drove the ball like a shot to center, scoring Miller. Robert Meusel hit into a double play.

In the fifth inning McNally rapped the ball to left field for two bases, an unexpected hit, and went to third on Schang's sacrifice. Mays struck out, but McNally suddenly electrified the crowd by stealing home while the next batter was at the plate. Snyder jabbed futilely at him with the ball and missed him. In the sixth inning Peckinpaugh began with a single to left field, one of the few hits that he made during the series. A passed ball put him on second. Ruth struck out and Robert Meusel made his longest hit of the series, a drive deep to left center for three bases. Peckinpaugh scored in a jog and Meusel was chagrined after he had reached third to be called out for failing to touch first base. It might have proved to be a very costly blunder, but fortunately for him his team could not be beaten because of his oversight. There was more desultory batting by the Yankees, just enough more than that of the Giants to make evident the difference between the teams on the first day. The score of the game follows:

SECOND GAME, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 6.

In the second game Waite Hoyt made his debut in a world series. He was opposed to Nehf and outpitched his rival cleverly. As in the first game the Giants were unable to make a run. In four innings they went out in one-two-three order and in the other five only four batters went to the plate in each inning. Hoyt's work was admirable and surpassed only by his own performances as the series wore on. The Giants never had any real advancement toward a run except in the third inning, when Rawlings, the first batter, started with a single. He watched two batters go out on easy chances while he was standing on first, and when the third batter walked to the plate was himself forced out at second.

The New York Americans began the first and second innings by having the first batter receive a base on balls. They were unable to score. In the third inning they were even better off with the bases filled and Robert Meusel at bat, but again could not score. In the fourth, with Pipp out, Ward singled to right field. McNally hit to Nehf. The latter threw poorly to second and both runners were safe. Schang got a base on balls, filling the bases. Hoyt hit a slow bouncer toward right field, which was tardy enough to permit Ward to score, but McNally, throwing prudence to the wind, attempted to score from second and was thrown out at the plate.

Nehf pitched much better in the next three innings and there was no hope of a run. In the ninth the American League batters became busy again, started by a muff by Frisch, who dropped Peckinpaugh's high fly back of the pitcher's plate. Ruth forced Peckinpaugh out and the Giants breathed easier, but Meusel smashed a long single to center on which Ruth scored by good running. Meusel went to second and an infield out put him on third. Like McNally on the previous day, Meusel decided that it was propitious to steal home and did so, scoring the last run for the Yankees. The score follows:

1, John J. Quinn; 2, Tom Rogers; 3, A. Ferguson; 4, Elmer Miller; 5, Michael J. McNally; 6, William Collins; 7, William Piercy; 8, J. Frank Baker; 9, Harry Harper; 10, Al De Vorme; 11, F. C. THIRD GAME, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 7.

Both managers had tried their best pitchers in the first two games and in the primary locking of horns the New York American League club had been successful. For the third game it was the supposition that the New York Nationals had the better of it with Toney to fall back upon. He was estimated as a stronger pitcher than Shawkey, who seemed to be Huggins' choice.

As it happened neither of them were of any particular good to the teams of which they are members, but the non-success of Toney was saving grace to the New York Nationals, who substituted Barnes for him, and it was the unexpectedly clever work of Barnes that went far toward turning the tide into the National League channel rather than that of the American League. Both Toney and Shawkey were taken out of the game in the third inning.

The game began as if Toney would mow his way through the ranks of his opponents with little trouble. The first three batters were easy outs. Shawkey was not so promising. With two out he put two on the bases, but was fortunate in getting Kelly out of the way for the third out.

In the second inning the New York Americans threatened to score when Robert Meusel started with a two-base hit, but eventually Meusel was thrown out at the plate trying to reach home on a short infield hit by Ward. The Giants began well in that inning, but Ward came to the assistance of Shawkey with a leaping catch and a fine double play.

In the third inning action began and Toney was the first to be thrown overboard. Schang was given a base on balls and Shawkey hit hard to right field for a base. Miller followed with a single to right and Schang scored. Peckinpaugh was given a base on balls, and when Ruth rapped the ball past Toney like a bullet, scoring Shawkey and Miller, Toney was relieved and Barnes took his place. Pipp's slow roller resulted in the batter being thrown out at first base, but Peckinpaugh scored the fourth run on the hit. Ruth was out stealing second and Ward struck out.

With four runs on which to go the New York American team seemed to be in clover and it looked for a moment to the partisans as if the Nationals might be defeated in successive games, because they had shown no inclination to do any hitting. However, exactly as the New York Americans had rushed Toney out of the box in the first half of the third, the New York Nationals sent Shawkey out of the game in the second half of the third.

Barnes, who is a powerful hitter even if he is a pitcher, singled to left field. Burns flied to center, an easy chance. Bancroft made his first hit of the series, a single to right field, and Frisch was given a base on balls. Shawkey gave Young, the next batter, a base on balls, forcing home a run, and followed it with a base on balls to Kelly, forcing home another run. Huggins let him remain too long. After the Kelly affair he sent him to the clubhouse, but he should have moved quicker, as after events proved, for Shawkey was evidently through by the showing that he made against previous batters. Barnes and Bancroft were the runners who were sent in by Shawkey's poor pitching. Emil Meusel was out at first base and then Rawlings stirred things up by hitting the ball squarely to left field, with Quinn pitching for the Yankees, and the score was tied.

For the next three innings the New York Americans peppered Barnes freely, but they could not collect any runs. They got men on the bases, only to see them remain there. The Nationals were doing the same thing to Quinn. Once Burns hit for three bases and was unable to score and in another inning Snyder and Burns hit safely, but neither got home.

In the seventh the storm broke and when it was finished the New York Americans were hopelessly out of it for one day. With Quinn still pitching, Frisch hit safely to center. Young followed with a double to right field, the ball bounding badly from the wall. That scored Frisch. Kelly was given a base on balls and Quinn's services as pitcher were finished. He had done well until then, but the game had got away from him.

Collins took Quinn's place and had nothing that baffled the New York Nationals. Emil Meusel caught a low ball on the end of his bat and lifted it to right field for two bases. Young and Kelly scored. Rawlings hit hard to center and Emil Meusel scored. Rawlings was caught stealing second, standing up, and in the meantime Collins had been relieved by Rogers. Snyder hit for a single to center as Rogers took charge and Barnes followed with a single to left field. Burns cracked a single to center and Snyder went home. Bancroft's sacrifice fly gave Barnes plenty of time to score and Frisch, for the second time up in the inning, was given a base on balls. Young cleared the bases with a long three-bagger to left center and was left on third when Kelly died on a feeble tap to the infield. The New York Nationals had scored eight runs.

In the eighth the Americans scored one run on a base on balls to Ruth, Fewster running for him; a wild pitch and Ward's single. The Giants also scored on E. Meusel's single to center, a stolen base and Snyder's single to left. Although Burns hit for two bases in the same inning, the best that Snyder could do was to reach third base, but the Nationals did not need the run. The Americans could make nothing in their half of the ninth and thus ended the hardest hitting contest of the series and the contest that first demonstrated the weakness of the American League contenders in pitching. The score of the game is as follows:

FOURTH GAME, SUNDAY, OCTOBER 9.

The fourth game of the world series might well be entitled the "Tragedy of Mays' Feet," for it was a slip and a roll on the grass that cost him more than a tie score. After the unfortunate experience with Shawkey, the Yankees were forced to use Mays for the second time. He was their sole available pitcher. The game was to have been played Saturday, October 8, but rain fell severely Saturday afternoon, just before practise began, and the field was rendered a mudhole in no time. There were some who actually urged that the game be played under conditions which would have been abominable for spectators and dangerous to players, but a wise policy postponed it.

Douglas pitched for the Giants. The day of rest had given both Mays and Douglas an added twenty-four hours in which to recuperate and both were better able to go on than they would have been had they been asked to pitch Saturday. In that respect the rain was kind to both managers.

For the first two innings both teams went out in order. In the third each got a runner on the bases. The New York Americans had the better start of the two in the third, as McNally, first man up, hit safely. He was caught stealing second on some play which is yet to be fathomed. He received a sign which meant nothing. In the fourth and fifth the New York Nationals were unable to make any impress upon the game. In the second half of the fifth the New York Americans scored their first run. Pipp began with a safe hit to left field. Ward sacrificed and when McNally hit to Frisch, Pipp was run down between second and third. It made little difference as one of them would have been out. Schang followed with a long three-bagger against the left field fence and McNally scored. In the ninth inning Ruth batted his only home run of the series, a ball hard driven that sailed into the corner of the right field bleachers, a region which had been deemed almost inaccessible to batters prior to the time of Ruth and his new records.

The sixth and seventh innings found the Giants unable to make any headway against Mays and it seemed certain that he would pitch another shutout game. As it was, he went sixteen innings without being scored upon. In the eighth inning Mays pitched the ball waist high to Emil Meusel with little speed. Meusel timed its flight perfectly and hit to center for three bases. Rawlings followed with a straightout hit to right field for a single and Meusel scored the tying run. Snyder, the next batter, poked bunt toward right field. Properly played, the batter would have been t. Better played the runner could have been caught at second, with a chance for a double play. The latter chance was slim, but existed. However, there should have been one sure out. Mays went after the ball and Pipp toward him, while no one covered first base. Mays slipped and sprawled on the ground. The ball rolled over a part of his body and his shoulder while he vainly grasped for it. He missed it altogether and Rawlings was t only safe at second but the batter was safe on first. Thus there were o on bases with a runner home and no one out, instead of a run with one t and only one on base.

Douglas followed the advantage gained by the Giants with a perfectly executed bunt up the third base line, advancing both runners, and Burns hit rough the infield for two bases, the ball shooting over the head of Peckinpaugh, who just managed to touch it. Two runs scored on Burns' and the next two batters were out. If Mays had fielded perfectly the nt made by Snyder, Burns would have been an easy out at first, with Peckinpaugh playing back of the line, and the score could only have been tied. The last run of the New York Nationals was made in the ninth inning en, with one out, Kelly hit to left field for two bases and scored on Meusel's single. Had Meusel not been caught trying to get to second some sort of a run-and-hit play the Giants might have scored more, as Schang followed Meusel with a hit. Snyder popped to Ward. The score the game is as follows:

FIFTH GAME, MONDAY, OCTOBER 10.

In the fifth game of the series the New York Americans, with Hoyt again in the box, took the lead in the race. Hoyt was hit much harder than in the first game that he pitched, but he was a skillful youngster with runners on the bases and in the very first inning, in which the only run was made against him, pulled himself out of a situation which was the direst plight in which he found himself at any time during the series. Hoyt was selected to pitch against him, and while he was more methodical and had better control of the ball than in his first game, he was not so successful as his younger rival and did not pitch as well.

There was action in plenty in the first inning. The Yankees were first at bat and went out in straight order. In the Nationals' half of the inning McNally fumbled Burns' grounder and the Giants, for the first time since the series began, had the first batter up in the first inning on base. Burns never before had been able to "get on" in the first. That little advantage was lost when Bancroft forced Burns at second. Frisch came through with a single to center field and when Hoyt gave Young a base on balls the bases were filled and the pitcher in trouble. Kelly rapped a single to center that scored Bancroft. Had Miller not been playing back to the fence he could easily have caught the ball, which carried just far enough over the infield to make it safe. E. Meusel stood still and had three strikes called on him and Rawlings forced Kelly at second. Certainly great pitching for the youngster, who might have been swamped by a start so menacingly made by his rivals.

In the second inning the Yankees began with a safe hit by R. Meusel. He got around to third base when Frisch muffed a throw to catch him, but when he tried to score he was nipped at the plate. With two out the Giants had two men on bases, but Bancroft was fooled on a play which was made by Robert Meusel. Burns had hit safely and Bancroft followed with a clean drive to right field. The latter turned first base, bound for second, evidently expecting that Meusel would throw to second and that the ball would be relayed to third; but Meusel, bluffing to throw to second, waited until Bancroft had turned first so far that the outfielder could shoot the ball in behind him. Bancroft was compelled to run toward second by this play and the Yankees played for him on the line until Burns dashed for home. The latter attempting to make a run was thrown out at the plate.

In the third inning the Yankees tied the score. McNally started with a base on balls. Schang did not try to sacrifice, but hit out and thereby fooled Emil Meusel in left field, who played the ball rather inaccurately. So Schang had a two-bagger, with McNally at third. Hoyt could not help his own game, but Miller flied to Burns and on the sacrifice McNally scored. Peckinpaugh was an easy out at first base, ending the half inning.

Smith got a base on balls to start the fourth for the New York Nationals, but was choked off at second when Nehf struck out. The Yankees won the game in their half. With the outfield playing away back for Ruth, as had been their custom, and with the infield drawn over toward right field, Ruth crossed them all by bunting to the right of Nehf. The pitcher threw the ball to first and missed Ruth by a step. Robert Meusel hit for two bases and Ruth scored. Meusel did not forget to touch first base this time. Pipp could not get him home, but Ward's sacrifice fly to Burns was long enough to permit Meusel to score the last run of the game.

The Giants continued to pick up hits off Hoyt, but they could put nothing together, while Nehf was a better pitcher with every inning that he continued. However, the lead was too much for the New York Nationals to overcome. The score of the game is as follows:

SIXTH GAME, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 11.

For the second time in the series the New York Nationals made an attempt to use Toney. For the second time he was knocked out of the box, and whether he might have won or lost, if he had been permitted to remain, it will always be in evidence that Barnes as a relief pitcher was really a standby pitcher. The New York Americans, with Mays and Hoyt both in need of rest, were put to it again to try one of their second division pitchers and for the second time it was demonstrated that the second division pitchers of the American League club could not stand the strain of a world series, however good they might have been during the long season's grind for the championship.

It was an American League "home" game. The teams changed daily—exactly the same as if they were home and visiting clubs—and the Giants were first at the bat. Burns drew a base on balls, reaching first for the second time in the series in the first inning. It did not help his team, for the next three batters were put out in succession. Harper, who was pitching for the New York Americans, was very wild as he began with Burns at bat, and when he got through the succeeding batters without being scored upon the American League folks drew sighs of relief because they felt that his stage fright, if it had been such, had worn off. In reality it had not.

For the Yankees Ruth was out of the game for the first time with his injured arm. In vain he attempted to make the doctors believe that he could play. They would hear nothing of it and informed him that if he tried to play, the consequences might be so serious that they would not be responsible for what happened. Fewster was put in the game to take his place. By rearrangement of the batting order, Fewster led off for the Yankees and Miller was dropped to third place.

In the first inning Toney gave Fewster a base on balls. Peckinpaugh fouled to Frisch. Miller hit safely to left and on Robert Meusel's drive to left for a base, Fewster scored. Pipp was a weakling with the stick, but Ward hit the ball on the nose to center field and Miller and Robert Meusel counted. That was sufficient of Toney. He was taken out of the box at once and Barnes was substituted. McNally flied out when Barnes began to pitch, and with three runs scored in the first inning the Yankee folks again began to build air castles.

In the second inning for the Giants Harper started by giving Kelly a base on balls. Harper was visibly more nervous than in the first inning. He pitched low to Emil Meusel and that versatile young man, who has a pronounced right-field swing when he feels like hitting that way, scooped the ball off his knees and propelled it into the right field stand for a home run. It was about five feet fair, but that was quite enough. Kelly scored in front of him. Rawlings flied out to Miller. Harper's speed (and he did have some at the start) seemed to have deserted him with Meusel's home run, and when he pitched to Snyder it was manifest that he had little power behind the ball. Worse than that, he grooved it, and Snyder, who can loft a ball almost as well as a golfer, hit far and high into the left field bleachers. The ball was pulled almost over to the foul line, showing that it had little speed, but the home run was as good as if it had been dropped in the center field seats. Harper still hung on, but when Barnes followed Snyder with a line drive to left field, Harper was summoned to the Yankees' dugout and Shawkey took his place. As a relief pitcher Shawkey showed no more than when he was tried as a starter, and both he and Toney, who had been fairly dependable men all of the season, were the real disappointments of the series so far as pitching went. Burns hit Shawkey safely and Bancroft struck out, while Frisch died on an easy chance.

In the Americans' half of the second inning Shawkey hit to left field for a base and Fewster renewed hope in every American League fan's heart by batting the ball into the left field bleachers for a home run, scoring Shawkey ahead of him. That was the third home run in one inning. With a lead of two runs to go on it was figured that Shawkey surely could hold the game the remainder of the way, but the fans had forgotten that Shawkey had not been able to hold a four-run lead when the Yankees had it once before. From this inning until the finish of the game Barnes was the dominant figure. The New York Americans could do nothing with him. If a player occasionally got on the bases, Barnes would strike out those who followed, and he finished with the excellent record of having struck out ten men in eight innings, which is good enough pitching for a criterion.

It was the fourth inning that brought woe to Shawkey. In the other game in which he pitched it was the third inning that was his undoing, but as he had not been brought into this game until the second inning his liberality was simply postponed for a while. Snyder began the fourth with a clean single to left field. Barnes hit to the same place. No attempt to sacrifice, simply straightout hitting and showing good judgment, because Barnes not always is the most satisfactory player in the world when trying to bunt. Burns pushed the ball down the third base line and McNally should have had him at first, but threw poorly. It was a disastrous blunder for the Americans. It made a difference of two runs to them. With the bases filled Bancroft cut the ball through the infield to left for a single, a feat at which he has excelled more than once in a regular league season. Frisch forced him out at second, but stole second himself. Young struck out and Kelly again hit safely, scoring Frisch. Four runs in all against Shawkey, a duplication of the former effort of the Giants when he was in the box, and another game gone into history.

The last run was scored by the Giants in the sixth inning. Bancroft began with a single to left field. Frisch was given a base on balls. As Kelly struck out, Bancroft bolted for third, but Schang expected it and threw him out easily. Frisch went on to second and scored on Kelly's single to center. The Giants did not need that run, but took everything they could while the taking was good. The score of the game is as follows:

SEVENTH GAME, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12.

With the series standing three and three the New York Nationals won the seventh game and turned the tide of luck their way, because both the seventh and the eighth were won by "breaks" as well as by good playing. The steadier fielding of the Giants carried them through. They did not make a fielding blunder in the seventh or in the eighth games and the Yankees, who had been really outfielding them up to that time, made two recorded errors which cost them to a large extent the series. There was one other play, which was officially given as a hit but which was a lenient disposition of a grounder and perhaps might have been scored as an error. Many thought it should have been. However, that is a matter of personal opinion and one has as much right to his belief as another.

Mays pitched against Douglas. Mays should have had a shutout game and Douglas should have been scored upon once. That tells the story of the game. The batting was feeble by both teams, a rather remarkable result in view of the fact that both of the pitchers had been in the box twice before. This series indicated that good pitching can triumph over almost anything in a series of short duration and also rather gave an upset to the lively ball theory which had been advanced much of the year to help out the shortcomings of some pitchers who were plainly not up to form.

It was a National League game, because the Nationals governed all the odd-numbered contests. The Yankees were at bat first. With one out Peckinpaugh hit for two bases, but could not score, and in the Giants' half, with one out, Bancroft hit for two bases and was unable to score.

In the second inning Pipp hit his only two-bagger of the series, a sharp liner to left field. Ward quickly put him on third with a sacrifice and McNally singled to right, scoring Pipp. Schang hit to Bancroft, and McNally, tearing into second head-on to try to make the base, so injured his shoulder that he was compelled to retire from the series.

Fewster began the third inning for the Yankees with a single to left field and was thrown out trying to make a two-bagger. There was a difference of opinion as to whether he should not have remained at first, as the play was in front of him and Emil Meusel, far over toward the left field foul line, was playing exactly where Fewster hit. Meusel had an easy throw and did not miss it. Peckinpaugh followed with a hit, but neither Miller nor Robert Meusel could help him to score.

The New York Nationals tied the score in the fourth inning. Frisch was an easy out at first base and Young hit to the right field side of second base. Ward had a seemingly easy play with the ball in front of him, but fumbled it. The ball rolled up his arm and the play was scored as a base hit, although there were many who considered it nothing but a simple error, because Ward played the ball directly before him and should have held it. Young stole second base. Schang was watching for him and threw perfectly to catch him. He threw almost too perfectly. The ball was squarely on a line with second base and Young slid under the baseman. Had the ball been a little toward right field it is possible that Young could have been retired. Kelly struck out and Emil Meusel caught a low pitch on the thick of his bat and hit to center field for a base, and also for a run, as Young scored. That was a run which was very damaging, and as luck would have it Young scored the next day on a run which was equally and more damaging.

The chances for runs for the New York Americans had all but exhausted themselves and no headway was made toward scoring until the seventh inning. With two out and two on bases Mays hit very hard toward right field. If Rawlings had fumbled the ball, or missed it, the Yankees would have been ahead, but he handled it cleanly and retired Mays at first base.

Then came the seventh inning for the Giants. Two hands were easily put out of the way. Kelly first of all by a throw by Peckinpaugh and Emil Meusel by a strikeout. Rawlings rolled a grounder between second and first. It was one of the easier chances for Ward. He had handled plenty before then which were much more difficult, but he fumbled the ball in such a manner that he could not throw out a slow runner like Rawlings. Snyder batted next, and on the second ball pitched put all of his strength into his swing and hit the ball fairly in the center. It was the hardest hit that he made in the series, although it was not a home run. On a clear field if the ball had not been checked it would have rolled a city block further than it did. Miller vainly tried to stop it, and when he found it impossible to do so with his hands, ran in front of it and stuck his foot in the way. That made it impossible to handle it accurately. It was an easy matter for Rawlings to score and Snyder got to third base while the ball was being handled in the field. That was the run which told the story and the New York Nationals were finally in the position of vantage, having to win but one game more to be sure that the world series was theirs. The score follows:

EIGHTH GAME, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13.

The final game of the series was one of the closest played of all and, like the seventh, was won or lost, as the reader will have it, by a flat error on an easy chance. It all happened in the first inning, although there were few who watched through all the game who realized until the final inning was over that they had seen the story of the game exploited in the first half hour of play.

Hoyt again was matched against Nehf, and Hoyt, all things considered, pitched a more remarkable game than he did on the second day, when he shut out the Giants without a run. It was a triumph for him, with his shorter experience and shorter period of activity as an athlete, to make his third of three remarkable games the best that he had pitched in his career. It showed that he has something in him of vastly more than average ability.

In sequence of play the game belonged to the American League. In the first inning the Giants went to bat first and won the contest under the noses of everybody because Peckinpaugh let an easy grounder trickle between his legs to left field with two on bases and two out. It would have seemed incredible then that the misplay was to cost the game, because all believed that at least a run would be scored by the Yankees to tie this first run made by a blunder. The pitching of Nehf was the best that he exhibited during the series and he dominated the Yankees completely, except in two innings.

Burns, first up, failed to get to first. Bancroft was given a base on balls. Frisch fouled out to Pipp. Young was also given a base on balls. There are some who insist that Chill made a mistake in giving Young his base and that he was struck out; Hoyt jumped two feet in the air when the fourth ball was called instead of the third strike. It was almost the only questioned decision by Hoyt. In any event, with a runner ready to score, the infield played in and Kelly drove a grounder straight to Peckinpaugh. The ball went between his legs and Bancroft scored. Peckinpaugh was so dazed over the misplay that he almost forgot to turn around to go after the ball, and Young, who was swinging around the bases at top speed, was not far from scoring himself. Emil Meusel was an easy out and the final game of the world series was already history, although the text of the story had not all been written. There were some who held Hoyt responsible for the run scored because he gave two bases on balls. Many times that is a sound stand to take and a good argument, but in this particular instance the error was so palpably that of Peckinpaugh that a pitcher could hardly be held responsible. Peckinpaugh would field such a hit accurately nine hundred and ninety-nine times out of one thousand.

In the Yankees' half of the first inning they played as if bent upon tying the score and going the Giants one better at least. With one hand out Peckinpaugh was given a base on balls. Miller singled to left and a wild pitch advanced both runners. If Robert Meusel had come through then with one of the long distance hits which had been made occasionally, the Yankees would have been in the ascendancy for the moment. He lifted a feeble fly to Kelly and Pipp struck out, looking at the ball as it whizzed by him.

In the second and in the fourth innings of this game Rawlings began with a two-base hit, but never scored. Twice Snyder sacrificed to put Rawlings on third, a reversal of the play of the Giants in other emergencies, and once Rawlings died at the plate as he tried to score. The other time he was left at third. In the sixth inning Emil Meusel began with a single, but was out easily at second base trying for some sort of a play with the batsman. Rawlings followed with a single and was left again. In the seventh Burns began with a base on balls, but there was to be no score. Hoyt was too much for the batters who followed.

Meanwhile the Yankees were doing no better. They were not doing as well. In the fourth inning with two out they had a glorious opportunity, and if Fate had struck the clock right for them with a long distance hit they had a chance to tie the score and even win. Two were out when Pipp hit to left field for a base. Ward rapped the ball on the nose to center for another single and Baker, who was in the game, was given a base on balls. Nehf was not going to take chances and did not give Baker a good one at which to hit. Schang had the great opportunity of the series. A base on balls meant a tie and a long hit probably meant victory, to judge by the way that both pitchers were going. He waited, but not long enough, and when a pitch came to his liking threw his all into the bat and died on a long fly to Burns.

The sensational killing of the game was in the last inning. Ruth, who had been unable to play, walked to the plate to bat for Pipp. Ruth could not swing well and that was very evident. In his last effort he hit the ball toward first base and Kelly grabbed it on the third bound and beat Ruth to the bag. Ward was given a base on balls. Baker, home run king of other days, was to complete the series. Waiting until he finally made Nehf pitch to him he drove a grounder toward right field that seemed as certain to go for a base, and perhaps two, as any hit that had been made in the series. Rawlings was never able to get in front of the ball. He threw himself to one side to stop it and managed to grasp it firmly enough to throw to first ahead of the runner. It was almost a miracle that he was able to stop the ball and another near-miracle that he was able to stop it in such a manner that he could throw it. Ward probably thought the hit safe. Whether he did or not, he thought it worth while to go to third base and, turning second, was more than half way to the bag when Kelly, one of the best throwers in the game, lined the ball across the diamond not more than five feet from the ground straight into the waiting hands of Frisch. The third baseman caught it and touched Ward out, although Ward ran into him and threw him end over end. Frisch came up with the ball in his hand, showed it to the umpire and bolted from the field. The world series was over with the National League triumphant. The score of the game is as follows:

UNUSUAL EVENTS IN WORLD SERIES PLAY.

McNally stole home for the New York American League club in the first game and Robert Meusel of the same club stole home in the second game.

Frisch made four hits in four times at bat in the first game, one of them a triple, but did little safe hitting after that.

In the ninth inning of four games—the first, second, sixth and eighth—there was a double play.

Kelly struck out ten times in eight games and Ruth eight times in five games.

Emil Meusel ("Irish") of the Giants was the only player to make a single, double, three-bagger and home run in the series.

Robert Meusel of the Yankees lost a three-base hit in the first contest by being declared out for not touching first base.

George Burns played three games without a chance in center field.

In six of the games R. Meusel of the Yankees had one chance in right field and in the other two he had two each.

Ruth stole second and third in succession in the fifth inning of the second game.

In the second game was given a base on balls the first three times in succession that he went to bat.

Frisch made the only infield fly muff of the series.

In the last three innings of the second game Ward of the New York American League had an assist or putout on every man who was retired on the opposing team, nine successive chances.

In the ninth inning of the sixth game three batters in succession flied out to Rawlings.

The series ended with an unusual double play, Rawlings to Kelly to Frisch, Baker being retired at first and Ward caught trying for third.

Shawkey gave three bases on balls in succession in the third inning of the third game.

Three times during the series Rawlings started an inning with a two-bagger and was unable to score in any one instance, and yet he scored the winning run of the seventh game.

The last two games were lost by the New York Americans because of infield errors.

In the sixth game Pipp, first baseman for the Yankees, had two putouts.

Barnes struck out ten players in the sixth game.

Mays' line drive in the seventh game was caught by Rawlings stretched to his full eight while leaping in the air and saved defeat.

In the third game eight runs were made in the seventh inning. In the same game total of twenty hits was made.

Emil Meusel and Snyder of the Giants and Fewster of the Yankees each made a home run in the third inning of sixth game.

Ruth made his solitary home run in the ninth inning of the fourth game, a tremendous drive which hit the end of the upper grandstand and bounded into the leachers.

As in 1920, when two brothers—Johnston—played on the opposing championship teams of Cleveland and Brooklyn, so in 1921 the brothers Meusel were opponents on the rival New York teams.

For hundreds of Giant followers, who never see the team away from home—not even Brooklyn, across the bridge—their traveling uniforms of gray looked strange. Also their occupancy of the visiting team's bench when it was the day on which the Yankees acted as the home club.

Louisville-Baltimore Post-Season Series

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Louisville	5	3	.625
Baltimore	3	5	.375

In the post-season series between the Class AA leagues the Louisville team of the American Association was successful in a hard fought schedule of eight games. Playing under the rules of the world series and the National Association Louisville won the five games necessary out of a possible nine and the International League was somewhat chagrined by the result, having anticipated success after the unusual showing made by Baltimore in its own organization.

The series opened at Louisville and the first game was won by Louisville by the ridiculously one-sided score of 16 to 1. Louisville made 19 hits. The opening attendance was only 3,253 and throughout the series Louisville showed little interest in the doings of the clubs. Baltimore evened the series in the second game when Ogden, their best pitcher, triumphed in a game by a score of 2 to 1. The third game fell to Louisville's share and with cold weather the attendance dwindled to 2,957. In the fourth game, which was played on Sunday in Louisville, the crowd overran the field and caused the game to be forfeited to Baltimore, 9 to 0.

The series was moved to Baltimore for the beginning of the fifth contest and Baltimore won, going to the front by a game. In a pitcher's duel for the next game Tincup of Louisville was more successful than Groves and the games were tied with three-all. Louisville won the next game by 7 to 6 in one of the most thrilling of all the contests played, and the largest crowd of the series was on hand, the attendance being 12,545. Louisville's fifth victory, in the eighth game, was won on the field at Baltimore with a score of 11 to 5. The attendance dropped to 2,807 for the last game, Baltimore evidently being of opinion that the International League champions had no chance to win against their American League rivals. The scores of the games are as follows:

Fort Worth-Memphis Post-Season Series

Fort Worth, for the second time in succession, won the championship the Texas League and for the second time in succession defeated the champions of the Southern Association in a post-season series. The losing club 1921 was Memphis and in 1920 it was Little Rock. The games of 1921 began September 21 and finished September 28. The first two were played at Fort Worth, the third, fourth and fifth at Memphis and the decisive game at Fort Worth. The last game was the best of the series and the pitching was superior to that of the five preceding games. Hits by Kraft and Coombs, the Fort Worth club were decisive factors for victory in the final game. The total unofficial attendance was 37,252, the enthusiasts of Fort Worth evincing more interest in the series than those of Memphis. The games were played under the control of the National Association, with world series rule and President M. H. Sexton of the minor leagues in charge. The batting of the Fort Worth club was superior. In two of the games they made seventeen hits and in one they made twenty. The scores of the games are follows:

Ludington-London Post-Season Series

For the first time since the reorganization of Base Ball a Canadian team engaged with one of the United States in a post season series for the Class B championship. London, Ontario, champion team of the Michigan-Ontario League, played Ludington, Mich., champions of the Central League. The world series rules were agreed upon, the team winning the first five games to be declared the victor, and the contests took place at London, Ontario, Ludington, Mich., and Grand Rapids, Mich. The series was won by London in five games. The teams tied three all on the first six games played. Some of the players engaged showed such skill that they were selected for positions in the major leagues another year.

Chicago City Post-Season Series

The Chicago American League club duplicated in 1921 its feat of 1916 by winning the post-season city series in successive games. The American League took all five contests, outplaying the Cubs in each of them. The final game was a scrambled effort by the National Leaguers to win once, five pitchers being used to try to head off defeat and capture at least a game of the series. The total attendance for the five games was 76,788 and the gross receipts were $71,338.18. The pool for the players totalled $36,382, or the Commission, $10,710, and for the clubs, $24,254. Faber pitched but once for the White Sox because of a wrench and Alexander pitched two games for the Cubs. Kerr's pitching for the American League was the finest feature of the games. The scores are as follows:

Pre-Season Major League Games of 1921

In the spring exhibition games of 1921 between the teams of the major leagues there were sixty-seven contests, of which the American League won 32 and the National League, 32. Brooklyn and New York A. L. took on the largest schedule, in which New York won nine out of a total of fourteen. The St. Louis Americans were successful over the St. Louis National League club, the Philadelphia Americans over the National League club in their game and Cleveland over Cincinnati in the Ohio games. Washington defeated the Philadelphia Nationals, and the New York Nationals defeated Washington. The results are as follows:

ST. LOUIS NATIONALS vs. PHILADELPHIA AMERICANS.

- At Houston, Tex. Philadelphia 2, St. Louis 1. Perry, Rommel, Harris and Moore pitching against Walker, Kircher and Sherdel. (14 innings.)
- At Houston, Tex. Philadelphia 6, St. Louis 2. Hasty and Naylor pitching against Haines, Kircher and May.
- At Beaumont, Tex. Philadelphia 13, St. Louis 5. Perry, Rommel and Harris pitching against Riviere, Schultz and Dodson.

GEORGE H. RUTH,
New York A.L.

Best Home Run Batter in the History of Base Ball.

Ruth's Home Run Record

It seems futile to predict anything about the home run possibilities or probabilities of George Herman Ruth, otherwise known as "Babe," except that he can make home runs when others cannot. When he batted out 29 one season some thought that to be the limit of home run endeavor, but that was only the beginning, because in the next year, 1920, he batted 54. Then he batted 54 the Base Ball prophets satisfied themselves by asserting that no one but Ruth could bat more than 54, and that was as near right as they could be.

Most of those who thought that 54 was his limit and the limit of Base Ball effort along that line, lived to see that it was not his limit. In the following year, 1921, he batted 59 home runs, and all during the season rounded the ball so true to form that he finished within one of his calculated total. The rule of percentage pointed to sixty home runs being made by him after the season had progressed a little. At one time it suggested a total of 65—but never less than 60—and when the season was finished he was within one of sixty, batting the fifty-ninth on the final day of the year.

Instead of even intimating that he will not bat 59 home runs in another season it seems safer to suggest that he will perhaps better his record again, unless the pitching improves very much over that of the last two years, and particularly over that of 1921. The fact that he batted only one home run during the world series has little or no bearing on a season. A world series is no criterion of what a ballplayer may do in six months.

Ruth began to bat home runs in 1921 two weeks earlier than in 1920, and one week earlier than in 1919. His first home run in 1921 was made April 16, and his last on the last day of the Base Ball year. He made his first home run in 1920 on September 29, and in 1919 on September 27.

In 1921 he batted two home runs on June 13 against Ehmke, Detroit, and on June 14 two against Daus, Detroit. That was four in two successive days. On July 2 he made a double-header, one against Russell, Boston, and the other against Myers, Boston. On July 12 he batted two against Davis, St. Louis. On August 8 he made a double-header against Wieneke, Chicago, and Kerr, Chicago. On August 23 he batted two against Caldwell, Cleveland. On September 26 he made his last brace in one afternoon by batting one each against Coveleskie and Uhle of Cleveland.

Reverting back to his home run hitting in June, attention is called to the fact that, beginning June 10, in five successive days he made seven home runs. On June 10 he hit for four bases against Bagby, Cleveland; on the 11th against Middleton, Detroit; on the 12th against Sutherland, Detroit; on the 13th against Ehmke, Detroit, twice; and on the 14th against Daus, Detroit, twice—a record for home runs on successive days which is beyond any previous achievement and which never had been imagined by the enthusiast possessing the wildest flight of imagination.

Going back to 1920 it is found that he made double-headers on May 11 when he batted Wilkinson and Kerr of Chicago for home runs the same day; on May 27, two against Harper and Karr of Boston; on June 2—his first one day's achievement—when he batted three, one each against Zachary, Carlson and Snyder of Washington; on June 25, two against Pennock, Boston; on June 30, two, of which one was against Bigbee, Philadelphia, and the other against Perry; on July 19, two against Kerr, Chicago; on August 6, two against Daus, Detroit; on September 4, one against Jones, and one against Bush, Boston; on September 24, one against Acosta, and one against Shaw, Washington; and on September 27, two against Rommel, Philadelphia. He had nine double-headers in 1920 against seven in 1921, and one triple-header in 1920, with one in 1921, although in the latter year he made an entirely new record for home runs on successive days.

In the 1921 issue of the BASE BALL RECORD the editor, in reviewing the work of Ruth for two years, suggested that if Ruth did not establish a total of 125 home runs in three years at the expiration of the 1921 season, the folks would be "abominably disappointed." No occasion for disappointment is in evidence. Not only did he make 125 home runs in three years but he went far over the mark, almost up to 150. His total of home runs for three years in succession is 142. Where it will be at the end of the fourth year not even the oracle dare venture to state. It is idle to speculate although it may be good fun which is only exceeded by the unmistakable enjoyment which is evident when he makes home runs. That it gives pleasure to spectators has been demonstrated frequently, not only to the enthusiasts who prefer to see the New York American League club win, but to those who are with the other club until it comes to an opportunity to see this prodigious batter hit for the circuit of the bases. In the world series he batted a single home run in a game which was lost by the Yankees even as he made it, but that one feat atoned for many heartaches that the Yankee "rooters" might have had prior to its accomplishment.

He is the most remarkable batter of Base Ball history. There is no doubt as to his superiority. He is not given many good balls to hit, and is compelled to pick out the best that he can from a bad lot. Perhaps pitchers would do as well against him if they pitched the ball to him, for it would be such a surprise that he might not get over it for a time. In the world series the New York National League pitchers pitched to him successfully by following a strike with a low ball at his knees, frequently getting him to go after it. To continue those tactics throughout a season would be foolish because it would be only a question of time before Ruth would be accustomed to them and act accordingly. In the last two games in which he played in the world series he was not in condition to bat, and what he failed to do, or what he did, was not a fair measure of his ability.

He has surpassed all other records of home runs to such a degree that the man in second place is so far away as to be lost in the perspective. As one ball player puts it, "Ruth's record is superlative and it should be set on one side as a standard while another might be adopted below it where some of the rest of us would have a chance to rival each other." The complete Ruth record for 1919 and 1920 are in the RECORD of 1921, and the record of Ruth's home runs made in 1921 is as follows:

Home Run Data

The phenomenal ability of Ruth to bat home runs is one of the great achievements of Base Ball. It has brought his personality to the fore as the most powerful slugger of all time. Coincident with the surpassing prowess of Ruth has been the compilation of all records pertaining to his work and compilations also of the batting power of players who preceded him, as well as of unusual batting feats in the history of Base Ball. Ed. F. Bang of the Cleveland News has made a record of home run achievements that lead all others since 1880 and including 1921 that is worthy of permanent reproduction in SPALDING'S BASE BALL RECORD and is published with his consent. It begins with four home runs in one game which is still the great feat of all home run feats and runs to three home runs in two games which, of itself, is no mean performance. These figures help to complete the home run chapter which has proved to be of such vital interest to all Base Ball enthusiasts since Ruth started his ruthless campaign against the home run records of all time. The records compiled by Mr. Bang follow:

Team Home Run Record

Once again the New York American League club has made a new team record for batting home runs. In 1921 they surpassed their 1920 total of 115 by a total of 133, an increase of eighteen four-baggers. Of these, fifty-nine were batted by Ruth, his individual home run record again leading that of all other years. Twenty-four were batted by Meusel. Baker made nine, Peckinpaugh and Pipp each eight; Schang six; Ward five; Miller, four; Roth and Mays each two, and McNally, Quinn, Hofmann, Hawks and Fewster each one.

The hits were divided against the other clubs as follows:

Against the Detroit pitchers, 26; Philadelphia pitchers, 22; Cleveland pitchers, 19; Boston and St. Louis pitchers, 17 each; Washington pitchers, 15. These are some of the feats of these big batters:

In four days they batted ten home runs against the Detroit pitchers.

In three days they batted seven home runs against Chicago.

In two days they batted six home runs against Philadelphia and in four days six against Boston.

In two days they batted five homers against Cleveland and five against St. Louis.

In three days they batted five homers against Detroit and five against Washington.

In four days they batted five homers against Cleveland.

On one day, July 4, they batted five homers against Philadelphia.

On one day they batted four homers against St. Louis.

Twice they batted four home runs against Detroit in four days. They did the same thing against St. Louis, and once each against Philadelphia and Cleveland they batted four in four days.

Once they batted four homers against Philadelphia in three days.

Doubleheaders—that is, two home runs in one day by one player—was another of the feats in which they were proficient. The record of their home runs for the season is as follows:

Infielders' Record for Extra Chances

In the RECORD of 1921 an innovation was introduced giving infielders credit for their work during a major league season. It was a table showing the number of times that an infielder accepted eight chances or more during the year in a nine inning game. The record was well received by the infielders and by Base Ball enthusiasts. Nothing of the kind had been attempted in the past and there was no real index on the ability of infielders. Guesswork told most of the story and some times the guesses were not always right. This record is repeated in this issue, showing the number of extra chances that were accepted in 1921. Dykes of the Philadelphia Americans leads all players and in 1920 the lead was held by Pratt of the New York Americans. Dykes was the only player in 1921 to accept seventeen chances and almost tied the major league record. He accepted eight chances eleven times, nine chances eleven times, ten chances four times, eleven chances three times and seventeen chances once. In 1920 there were five players who accepted fourteen chances. On the whole the fielding was a little more accurate in 1921 than it was in 1920. The basemen and shortstops covered more ground. One of the best records was that of Parkinson, a player with neither minor league nor major league experience, who did well enough for the Philadelphia Nationals to stand fifth in the list. The table of records is as follows:

CHANCES ACCEPTED IN ONE GAME AND NUMBER TIMES ACCEPTED.

League Meetings

NATIONAL LEAGUE MEETING.

The annual meeting of the National League began in New York, December 13, President John A. Heydler presiding. Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn offered a resolution that the major leagues decline to purchase players from those leagues which were opposed to the draft rule. It was not adopted, but held open for discussion although favored by several.

In the annual report of President Heydler he announced that the attendance had nearly equaled that of 1920. Four clubs showed increased patronage. They were New York, Pittsburgh, Boston and St. Louis. He congratulated the Giants on their double victory which won the championship of the National League and the world series and alluded to the substantial benefit which had been organized for Christopher Mathewson.

He suggested legislation looking to the arrest and conviction of pop bottle throwers, the protection of umpires in exhibition games between the National and American League clubs; arrangement of exits whereby players and umpires might not come together after games and some plan by which proper training might be given to young ball players who declined to join minor leagues for fear their advancement to higher classes and better pay would be obstructed.

The league voted to adopt a schedule of 154 games beginning on or about April 12. An appropriation was made to pension John B. Day, former owner of the Giants. The pension was continued to Mrs. Pulliam Johnson and a substantial sum was voted to the widow of Peter Harrison the umpire. Resolutions of thanks were voted to the New York club for its handling of the world series.

Those who were present were John A. Heydler, president; George W. Grant, Boston; William F. Baker, Philadelphia; Charles H. Ebbets, Stephen McKeever, and Charles H. Ebbets, Jr., Brooklyn; Charles A. Stoneham, John J. McGraw and Francis X. McQuade, New York; Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh; William Veeck, Chicago; Samuel Breadon, Branch Rickey and J. C. Jones, St. Louis; August Herrmann and Louis Widrig, Cincinnati.

The Board of Directors for the ensuing year was elected as follows: Charles A. Stoneham, New York; George W. Grant, Boston; William Veeck, Chicago; Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh.

On the second day of the meeting the plan of Mr. Ebbets to refrain from purchasing the releases of players who belong to leagues that oppose the draft was discussed at length and the outcome was the adoption of a resolution which reads as follows:

"Resolved, That President Heydler, as a member of the Advisory Council, be instructed to present to his colleagues a proposition to amend the major and minor league regulations and to reestablish the draft."

That resolution placed the National League unequivocally in favor of the drafting of players in Base Ball.

The president was advised to report the condition of all clubhouses for visiting players throughout the circuit.

Committees were named as follows: Schedule, John A. Heydler and Barney Dreyfuss; Constitutional Amendments, August Herrmann, William F. Baker, Charles A. Stoneham; Playing Rules, William Veeck, Sam Breadon, John A. Heydler; Telegraph, Charles H. Ebbets, George W. Grant, William F. Baker.

AMERICAN LEAGUE MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the American League which was held in New York beginning December 14, it was the consensus of opinion that a seven game world series was better than a series of nine games. Frank J. Navin of Detroit was elected vice-president, and the Board of Directors was appointed from the Detroit, St. Louis, Washington and Philadelphia clubs. The American League went on record as favoring the draft. Gamblers and crooked players were barred from their grounds.

In addition to President Johnson those present at the meeting were Colonel Jacob Ruppert and Colonel T. L. Huston, New York; Thomas Shibe and Connie Mack, Philadelphia; Frank J. Navin, Detroit; James C. Dunn and E. S. Bernard, Cleveland; Phillip D. C. Ball and Robert Quinn, St. Louis; H. H. Frazee, Boston; Clark Griffith and W. M. Richardson, Washington; Louis Comiskey and Harry Grabiner, Chicago.

JOINT MEETING OF MAJOR LEAGUES.

At a joint meeting of the major leagues, the National and the American, which was held in New York beginning December 15, it was agreed that the world series would be limited in the future to seven games instead of nine. Seven was the original number as first entered upon the world series rules. The American League favored seven games and the National League, except the Chicago club, favored nine games. Commissioner Landis, who had advocated seven games, cast his vote, which was the decisive vote for a return to the old conditions.

It was agreed that if two or more clubs put in claims for players on whom waivers had been asked the team holding the lowest position in the league standing was to have prior right to the player.

The number of players to be permitted on optional agreement was increased from eight to fifteen. An increase in the club roster of major leagues from forty players to forty-five was denied. It was also agreed that if a club roster was filled—forty players—no claim might be made by that club for a player on whom waivers had been asked. A player claimed on waiver was allowed to be returned within five days. A waiver asked was permitted to be withdrawn within five days. A club obtaining a player by the waiver process that subsequently asked waivers on the same player within thirty days during the playing season or ninety days during the off season, must give first claim to the club from which the player was secured by waiver.

Umpires were forbidden to act as scouts and scouts were forbidden to act for more than one club. Voluntarily retired players who ask for restoration must first appeal to the president of the league with which they were last affiliated.

ADVISORY COUNCIL MEETING.

At a meeting of the Advisory Council, which consists of Commissioner Landis, President John A. Heydler, of the National League, and President Ban B. Johnson, of the American League, the minor leagues urged upon the majors the abrogation of the regulation by which a major league club that invades minor league territory is required to pay the sum of $5,000. It was held by the minor leagues that this amount was out of all proportion to the actual loss which might be sustained by the minor organization. The subject was given a full hearing, and is to be taken up at a future meeting of the Advisory Council.

The draft was discussed, but no definite action could be taken, because the minor league representatives who were present assured the members of the council that they were only there in their individual capacity in regard to anything in connection with the draft, as they had not been authorized by their leagues to present the subject to the Council.

It was agreed to loan to Willie Keeler, the former great outfielder, the sum of $5,500. Keeler was reported ill and as having met with financial reverses.

At the conclusion of the Advisory Council meeting the following statement was given out by Commissioner Landis:

"The question has arisen what to do about the draft. It is a principle of base ball that the player must advance in his profession according to his skill. To secure to him and the game this result the draft rule was devised and remained in effect until 1918. Since the base ball reorganization of a year ago certain leagues have declined to submit to the draft.

"These leagues are the American Association, New International, Pacific Coast, Western and Three I. Recognizing the existence and operation of the draft as fundamental and believing that a deviation from it anywhere or to any extent to be a menace to the right of the player and the welfare of the game, the National and American League clubs have authorized the Commissioner to present to the leagues mentioned the following as a fair basis for the settlement of this grave question:

"(1) One player of each AA or A club shall be eligible to selection or draft after the close of its season each year, the selecting club to pay in cash upon exercising the right the sum of $5,000 to the AA clubs and $4,000 to the A clubs.

"(2) In the event any selected player is released by a major league club within one year of his selection the club of the AA and A shall first have the right to secure his services upon paying to the releasing club one-half the draft price paid by that club.

"The Commissioner has a deep conviction that this is in harmony with the principle now subscribed to by the major and all minor leagues and always to be borne in mind that the player's right and welfare of the game require that his services shall be available to the clubs of highest classification."

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

The National Association had its largest and its most generally attended annual meeting at Buffalo during the week beginning December 5. The more remote sections of the United States never were better represented at the congress of the minor leagues. California, Texas, Florida, New England, Washington and the Dominion of Canada sent delegates. In addition to those were the scores of base ball men who were present from points more nearly adjacent to Buffalo. Even the major leagues in their most prosperous days have not found it possible to secure better representation than that which attended the Buffalo conference.

In his annual report Secretary Farrell stated that twenty-six leagues began the season and finished it. The Kentucky State League and the Inter-Provincial League did not start. There were 5,401 contracts recorded during the year, which will give some idea of the number of ball players who are under the jurisdiction of the National Association. The sum of $454,000 was paid through his office for the assignment of contracts from the minors to the majors, showing the interdependence of the organizations.

The Piedmont League was advanced to Class C in 1921, the South Atlantic League to Class B, and the Florida State League to Class C.

The report of President Sexton contained various suggestions for curtailing the expenses of operating minor league clubs. It was his contention that unnecessary privileges were granted to the players which made the cost of base ball too high for the smaller cities.

A new board of arbitration was appointed, consisting of Class AA, W. H. McCarthy, president Pacific Coast League; John C. Toole, president International League; Class A, John D. Martin, president Southern Association; Dan O'Neill, president Eastern League; Class B, N. B. Corish, South Atlantic League; Class C, W. G. Bramham, Piedmont League; Class D, J. V. Jamison, president Blue Ridge League.

The Southwestern League was moved up from Class D to Class C. Louisville was selected as the place of meeting in 1922. It was announced that players listed as "reserve jumpers," as distinct from "contract jumpers" may be reinstated on application to the Secretary of the National Association and by paying $200. This applies to all players on the voluntarily retired list playing with or against clubs containing ineligible players. They must return to the clubs from which they severed their connection.

The association made no changes in the salary limits, but in line with the recommendations of President Sexton, increased the fines to be levied against clubs violating existing rules.

While the meeting was in session some of the most important player transfers in the history of the National game were made by major league and minor league club owners. The New York National League team secured Groh from Cincinnati by the payment of a sum of money said to be $100,000, and by sending Burns, an outfielder, and Gonzales, catcher, to Cincinnati. From San Francisco Cincinnati obtained Caveny, shortstop, or $25,000, and Cincinnati players. The Cincinnati secured Pinelli, third baseman, from Oakland, Cal., by the payment of $10,000. Detroit took Hallett and Johnson, pitchers, from Portland, Ore., by the payment of $40,000 and players to be named.

The most important event of the meeting was the address delivered at the annual banquet by Judge Landis, Commissioner of Base Ball. In it he strongly intimated that all of the leagues would better return to the principle of the draft. While this was a topic which was in the minds of every one present at the National Association meeting nothing was done in regard to modifying draft regulations except possibly at conferences which were held by the clubs interested.

After Judge Landis had spoken to the Minor League owners there still remained a disposition on the part of many to feel that they could better be left alone to take care of their affairs without being subject to draft or without coming into closer affiliation than already existed with the majors.

The address of Judge Landis was so pointedly directed toward certain abuses and unsatisfactory conditions that have crept into base ball that its more important statements to the delegates are reproduced. He said in part:

"I did not come here to sound any alarm, but I don't want any of us to grow unduly optimistic over the return from the slough into which we were precipitated in the fall of 1920. Base ball is still on trial in America. Base ball will continue on trial in America as long as base ball is played. That is true because base ball in America serves a great, overwhelming, influencing public function. It is not enough to say that base ball must be as sound as any other business. Base ball has got to be better in its morality than any other business. The cashier of the bank may go wrong, but the bank does not necessarily fail; the superintendent of the Sunday school or the minister in the pulpit may go wrong, but the church does not necessarily fail; but base ball has got to keep right all the time.

"I am not dealing merely with the proposition of what is commonly in the minds of men when you talk about dishonesty. I am not talking and thinking merely of a player that goes wrong or half a dozen players that go wrong. I have in mind the fact that in the stand are the crowds of people who have an ideal in their minds, conjured up from childhood, fed year after year by their devotion to this game—what they see on the diamond and what they read about the performances on the diamonds all over the country—I have got in mind the ideal thought of that ideal fan; and it is up to you of the National association and to you gentlemen of the majors and to everybody in Base Ball who has anything to do with Base Ball, to keep that thought constantly in mind, of absolute fairness, absolute cleanliness, and above all a devotion which these things, of course, presuppose the existence of a devotion that I will generalize under the term of 'absolute fidelity.'

"If I had understood one year ago, when we met down at New York and went through these rules, the meaning of the words, the practical operation of the language in the rules and a conception of the effect of the operation of the rules, I would have called together again the gentlemen of the majors and the National association for one more conference on the draft question, in order that the last effort might have been devoted to solving the problem of what is now called 'the selection of players' and I say to you gentlemen among us we have got to devise a plan to get out of what is called base ball is a national institution, as distinguished from one leagues interests or one club's interests—we have got to devise some plan to solve that thing. Now, you have been in this longer than I, and I don't assume a superior knowledge and wisdom on this subject, but I know that when I suggest to you the advisability of composing your differences on that subject I am giving you the best advice anybody has given you this year. There is no question about that.

"The object of organized base ball is to facilitate the development of skill among ballplayers. It cannot be a good thing for a thing calling itself sport, that it is within the power of any individual in that sport to place stone wall in front of the advancement of a ballplayer. I don't say that with any pleasure. But I am giving you what I have here as a deep conviction, and I want you gentlemen to think it over and go to the foundation stones of this question and reexamine the question with an earnest, good faith effort, to see if you cannot figure out a way to compose and eliminate your differences and get out of the situation this thing that some day will surely rise to plague you."

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the American Association held in Chicago, December 20, it was agreed to play a schedule of 168 games. A communication was received by the members of the Association from Commissioner Landis in regard to the drafting of players, but President Hickey, of the Association, announced that no official action would be taken upon it. In his opinion the Association would be governed by the agreement which was made when the reorganization of base ball took place in Chicago.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE ANNUAL MEETING.

At the annual meeting of the New International League, which was held in New York beginning December 12, the greater part of the session was given up to the consideration of the constitution of the league and its executive rules.

The subject of the draft of players also came before the members, and after the adjournment of the meeting the following announcement was made by John Conway Toole, president of the league:

"The draft matter was by unanimous expression of the meeting regarded as settled for the life of the present major and minor league agreements, namely, seven years from January 12, 1921, on which date the major and minor leagues voted the present rule. The International League voted before February 15, 1921, not to submit to the draft and waived its rights to draft from lower classification. That is the present position of the league and no change is contemplated."

No rearrangement was announced in the circuit of the organization, although it was announced that both Montreal and Providence were applicants for membership. The waiver price for players in the league was raised from $1,000 to $2,000.

Those present at the meeting were: John Dunn, John Dunn, Jr., and C. E. Knapp, Baltimore; S. L. Robertson and George Wiltse, Buffalo; Fred Shollenberger, Reading; David R. Price and P. J. Donovan, Jersey City; Roy Mac and Bernard Moran, Newark; E. C. Landgraf, Syracuse; George T. Stalling and Walter E. Hapgood, Rochester, N. Y.; James J. McCaffrey and Lawrence Solman, Toronto.

BASE BALL WRITERS' MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Base Ball Writers' Association was held December 15, in New York. Fred G. Lieb, of New York, was elected president and Joseph McCready, of Philadelphia, was again chosen secretary and treasurer. Commissioner Landis was invited to address the writers, and in the course of his remarks again emphasized the necessity for some kind of a draft rule in Base Ball which would permit the players of the minor organizations to find their way into leagues of higher classification.

The association reported a successful year and a fund of over $1,000 on hand in the treasury.

Giants Pay $75,000 for Minor League Player

J. F. O'CONNELL.

While the meeting of the National Association was in session at Buffalo, N. Y., during the month of December, 1921, John J. McGraw, acting for the New York National League club, purchased the release of J. F. O'Connell, a player of the San Francisco club, for the sum of $75,000, the player to remain with San Francisco during the season of 1922. The amount given for the services of the young player is the largest sum paid for the transfer of a minor league prospect to a major league in the history of Base Ball.

The stipulation that the player should remain with the San Francisco club for another season before joining the New York Nationals is not an innovation. Purchases of releases have been made in the past with a private understanding that the player might remain in the minor organization another year, but this is the first instance where such an enormous amount has been paid accompanied by the open declaration that the player would be permitted to "season" another year with the minors. During 1921 O'Connell batted .337, which attracted the attention of those who fancied the player. He was tried both at first base and in the outfield. Indications were that he would make a better outfielder than first baseman.

Abbreviations Used in the Averages

It is necessary in compiling the averages of ballplayers for permanent record to make use of abbreviations, which are not always understood by beginners in Base Ball or by some of the older followers of the game. Some of those who compile records use symbols of their own. Throughout the averages of the many leagues which are published this year in the BASE BALL RECORD the following abbreviations occur in their proper relation to the figure totals, and in the table which is appended a full explanation is given of each symbol for batting, fielding and the pitchers, beginning, for instance, with the simple "G" which is the statistician's and the scorer's way of describing "game." It may be well to note that "RBI" and "RRF" mean the same—"runs batted in by the player to whom credit is given."

Two hundred and forty-five players took part in games for the National League clubs during the past season. Of this number, 177 players engaged in fifteen or more games, while 68 played in less than fifteen contests.

National League batting history of the previous year repeated itself, as both Rogers Hornsby and the St. Louis Cardinals won leading honors for the second successive year.

Hornsby's batting mark of .397 is the highest average since 1899, when Edward Delehanty of Philadelphia led the League with an average of .408. It is a net gain of twenty-seven percentage points over his mark of 1920, while the St. Louis club, which led in club batting with a percentage of .308, improved its mark of 1920 by nineteen percentage points.

Rogers Hornsby made the most hits, 235, led in two-base hits, with 44, and tied with Ray Powell of Boston for the most three-baggers, with 18.

As in 1920, Rogers Hornsby again leads the long hitters, with 378 total bases, for an extra-base percentage of .639.

Six players made two hundred or more hits, as follows: Rogers Hornsby and Austin McHenry of St. Louis, 235 and 201 hits, respectively; Frank Frisch and Emil Meusel of New York, 211 and 201 hits, respectively; Carson Bigbee of Pittsburgh, 204 hits, and James Johnston of Brooklyn, 203 hits. Not since 1899, when seven players made 200 hits, have so many National Leaguers reached this high mark.

Eight players joined the "Century Run Club" in 1921, as follows: Hornsby led with 31 runs; Frank Frisch and David Bancroft, each scored 121; Raymond Powell 114, George Burns 111, James Johnston 104, and Carson Bigbee 100.

Frank Frisch of New York was easily the leading base stealer, with 49 stolen bases.

Milton Stock of St. Louis led at sacrificing, with 36 sacrifice hits.

Ivan Olson of Brooklyn faced pitching the most, going to the bat 652 times.

Six players engaged in every game their clubs played, as follows: Hornsby 15, Frisch, Bancroft, Boeckel and Bohne 153 each, and James Johnston 152.

A tie exists for the longest streak of safe hitting in consecutive games, as Carso Bigbee and Joseph Rapp both maintained batting streaks in 23 successive games.

Nine players made five hits in a game, as follows: John Smith of St. Louis, twice; William Southworth, Walter Barbare and Fred Nicholson of Boston; Max Carey and Walter Maranville of Pittsburgh, Frank Frisch of New York, Thomas Griffith of Brooklyn and George Maisel of Chicago.

Players tallied four runs per game on twelve occasions, as follows: Rogers Hornsby and William Southworth, each twice; Raymond Powell, Thomas Daly, David Bancroft, Frank Frisch, George Cutshaw, Max Carey, Carson Bigbee and John Smith of St. Louis.

Rogers Hornsby hit for the most total bases in a game, 11, making a three-bagger and two home runs on June 7.

Davis Robertson of Pittsburgh, by batting in 8 runs on August 19, equalled the National League runs-batted-in record, held jointly by Bransfield of Pittsburgh and Cravath of Philadelphia. The old National League runs-batted-in record of 11 runs in one game, was made in 1892 by Wilbert Robinson of Baltimore.

CLUB BATTING FEATURES.

St. Louis, for the second year in succession, led in club batting with a batting percentage of .308, that club making the most hits, 1635; the most total bases hits, 2320, and the most two-base hits, 260.
 Boston faced the most pitching, going to bat 5385 times.
 New York scored the most runs, 840. Chicago made the most one-base hits, 1226. Pittsburgh made the most three-base hits, 104. Philadelphia leads in home runs, 88. Chicago led in sacrificing with 208. New York led with 137 stolen bases.
 The 1921 season produced 67 shutouts, the clubs having scoreless defeats as follows: Pittsburgh 14, Philadelphia, Chicago and Cincinnati 11 apiece, Boston 8, and New York, St. Louis and Brooklyn 4 times each.
 Only one tie game was played, this on October 1 by Pittsburgh and St. Louis.
 The protested game was played, on May 28 between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.
 Two unusual incidents occurred during the past season: In the game of May 27, Pittsburgh, versus Cincinnati, Pittsburgh made nine hits, each of the nine players batting order getting a hit. On July 29, at St. Louis, versus Brooklyn, the nine St. Louis players in batting order each went to the bat three times for a team total twenty-seven official times at bat. There were no sacrifice hits nor bases on balls hit batsmen made by the St. Louis club.

INDIVIDUAL FIELDING.

Walter Holke of Boston set a new National League fielding record for first base-men, having fielded for a percentage of .997 in 150 games and making only 4 errors of 1561 chances offered.
 George Kelly of New York had the most putouts, 1552, the most assists, 115, and the most chances offered, 1684. Edward Konetchy of Brooklyn and Philadelphia made the most errors, 20.

Samuel Bohne of Cincinnati heads the second basemen with a percentage of .97. John Rawlings of Philadelphia and New York had the most putouts, 342, the most assists, 495, the most errors, 32, and the greatest number of total chances, 869.

Charles Deal of Chicago is the leading third baseman with a percentage of .97 repeating both his record and percentage of 1920. Norman Boeckel of Boston had the most putouts, 184; James Johnston of Brooklyn had the most assists, 312, and tied with Norman Boeckel for the most errors, 33 each; James Johnston of Brooklyn had the greatest number of total chances, 507.

Charles Hollocher of Chicago holds the honor position among the shortstops with a percentage of .963. David Bancroft of New York had the most putouts, 396, the most assists, 546. John Lavan of St. Louis and Ivan Olson of Brooklyn made the most errors, 49 each; David Bancroft of New York had the greatest number of total chances, 981.

Max Flack of Chicago is the leading outfielder with a percentage of .989. Mickey Carey of Pittsburgh had the most putouts, 431, most errors, 20, and the greatest number of total chances, 466; while Fred Williams of Philadelphia made the most assists, 29.

Walter Schmidt of Pittsburgh leads the catchers with a percentage of .986. He made the most putouts, 438, most assists, 120, and had the greatest number of total chances, 566. Ivy Wingo of Cincinnati made the greatest number of errors, 18, and Otto Miller of Brooklyn had the most passed balls, 11.

While ten pitchers went through the season with perfect fielding records, the actual honors go to Jesse Barnes of New York, who handled 91 chances without error. Barnes also had the most putouts, 24; Eppa Rixey of Cincinnati had the most assists, 97; Hugh McQuillan of Boston made the most errors, 9, and Joseph Oeschger of Boston had the greatest number of total chances, 109.

An unusual incident occurred in the first game of September 12, in Pittsburgh when Albert Nixon of Boston played all three outfield positions and had three putouts in each.

Ed Konetchy of Brooklyn and Philadelphia set a new major league record making 5 unassisted double plays during the season.

Horace Ford of the Boston club, in the game of June 16, at St. Louis, equalled a major league record of thirty-nine years standing when he made 12 assists accepting 14 chances. This ties the record for assists made in 1882 by Dunlap Cleveland, who made 12 assists in accepting 18 chances.

Chicago was first in fielding with a percentage of .974. Pittsburgh made the most putouts, 4241. Philadelphia had the greatest number of assists, 2176, made the most errors, 295, and had the largest number of total chances, 6511. New York made the greatest number of double plays, 155, which established a new record for double plays in a season. Chicago had the most men left on bases, 1104, and Cincinnati the least, 997.

Six triple plays were completed during the season, Boston figuring in two of them. Two of these rare performances occurred on the same day, August 30, when both Chicago and Boston executed triple plays against their opponents, New York and Cincinnati, respectively. In the next game that New York played, September 1, the Brooklyn club made a triple play.

The above pitchers throw right-handed, except Clarke, Cooney, Eays, Kircher, May, Rader, Leo Townsend and Weinert.

In arranging the National League pitchers of 1921 in the order of their effectiveness, it was found expedient to classify them into three groups, as has been done for the four years preceding. The first group embraces all those who bore the brunt of the campaign and pitched at least ten (10) complete games; the second, those who participated in a minimum of ten (10) games, regardless of the length of same; the third comprising all others who took part in a championship contest. The percentage of games won and lost is given, with notation of the relative position of each pitcher, this special record being supplied in order that comparison may be made with the official earned run rating.

William Doak, St. Louis, has the title of leading pitcher, with the lowest average of 2.58 runs earned per game. A tie exists for the lead in percentage of games won and lost, as both Charles B. Adams and Charles Glazner, Pittsburgh, won 14 and lost 5 games. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, with Wilbur Cooper, Pittsburgh, won the most games, 22 each. George A. Smith, Philadelphia, lost the most games, 20. John Scott, Boston, pitched in the most games, 47. Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, pitched in the most complete games, 30. Louis North, St. Louis, finished the most games, 26. Wilbur Cooper, Pittsburgh, pitched the most innings, 327.

A tie exists for leading pitcher in shutout games. The following eight pitchers each pitched 3 shutouts—John Morrison, Pittsburgh; Philip Doughlas, New York; Jesse Haines, St. Louis; Clarence Mitchell, Brooklyn; Grover Alexander, Chicago; Adolfo Laque, Cincinnati, and Dana Fillingim and Joe Oeschger, Boston.

Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn, led in strikeouts, 136. Joe Oeschger, Boston, allowed the most bases on balls, 97, and Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh, allowed the least, 18. James J. King, Philadelphia, made the most wild pitches, 14, while Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh; John Scott and John Watson, Boston, and Leon Cadore, Brooklyn, made none at all. Joe Oeschger, Boston, hit the most batsmen, 15; Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh, hit none.

Wilbur Cooper, Pittsburgh, allowed the most hits, 341, and John Morrison, Pittsburgh, allowed the least, 131. Wilbur Cooper, Pittsburgh, pitched to the greatest number of batters, 1,377.

Eppa Rixey, Cincinnati, allowed the most sacrifice hits, 41, and Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh, allowed the least, 10. George A. Smith, Philadelphia, allowed the most runs to be scored, 166; John Morrison, Pittsburgh, allowed the least, 49. Wilbur Cooper, Pittsburgh, allowed the most earned runs, 118; John Morrison, Pittsburgh, and Jesse F. Winters, Philadelphia, allowed the least, 46 apiece.

Charles B. Adams, Pittsburgh, had the longest consecutive winning streak, 9 victories.
 George A. Smith, Philadelphia, had the longest consecutive losing streak, 8 defeats.
 John Watson, Boston, was the only pitcher to win a double-header. After winning the first game, August 13, from Philadelphia, at Boston, Watson allowed two hits in the second game, winning with a shutout. Both contests lasted nine innings.

Louis North, St. Louis, had the unique record of pitching in 40 games, in all of which he acted as relief pitcher.

Rogers Hornsby of St. Louis led in runs batted in with 126. George Kelly of New York was a close second with 122. While no player succeeded in batting in 100 runs in 1920, five players entered this select circle in 1921, as Ross Young and Frank Frisch of New York and Austin McHenry of St. Louis reached the mark in addition to Hornsby and Kelly.

George Burns of New York for the third successive year, led in obtaining the greatest number of bases on balls, 80. Raymond Powell of Boston struck out the most times, 85. Captain Southworth of the same club struck out but 13 times in 141 games.

Jacques Fournier, St. Louis, and Samuel Bohne, Cincinnati, were caught out stealing the most times, 22 apiece. Among the club leaders, New York batted in the most runs, 748, and also received the most bases on balls, 469. Philadelphia struck out the most times, 615. Cincinnati was caught out stealing the most times, 120.

Batting of the most sensational character featured the games of the American League throughout the 1921 season. Phenomenal fielding plays were a natural sequence to the heavy hitting, and fast and clever base running on hit and run plays was the order of the day. The art of base stealing, however, was almost discontinued, it being obvious that to take two bases or more on the probable forthcoming base-hit was better strategy for the runner than to risk being cut down on an attempt to steal.

No less than 12,525 safe hits were made in 616 games, of which 2140 were two-baggers, 694 for three bases, and the hitherto unprecedented number of 477 were home runs. They averaged a little more than twenty to the game, of which more than five were for extra bases.

The Detroit club led in batting with an average of .316 for the season, followed by Cleveland with .308; St. Louis, .304, and the champion New York Yankees with an even .300.

The champions, led by Babe Ruth, drove out 134 home runs and were first in total bases. St. Louis gathered 106 triples and Detroit 100, while the Cleveland Indians batted 355 two-base hits. The ex-champions also coaxed 614 bases on balls, New York being awarded 588 and Detroit 582.

The greatest individual record of the year, attracting more interest than anything that has heretofore occurred in Base Ball, was the performance of George H. Ruth, who broke his own world record for home runs by making fifty-nine hits that were good for the round trip. In three successive seasons Ruth has raised the record of twenty-five home runs made in 1899—first to twenty-nine, then to fifty-four and now to fifty-nine.

Harry F. Heilmann, Detroit outfielder, beat out Manager Cobb by five points for the league leadership in batting with a record of .394. Heilmann made 237 hits in 149 games for a total of 365 bases. Forty-three of his safeties were for two bases, 14 were triples and 19 were home runs. Heilmann scored 114 runs and was responsible for 120 more of the Tigers' total of 883. He is credited in the R.R.F. column with 139 runs, but these include his 19 homers. Heilmann led every one in sending runs across the plate except Ruth, who is credited with 170, of which 59 were his own four-base hits. Ruth scored 177 times, J. T. Tobin, St. Louis, being second with 132, Sisler third with 125, and Cobb fourth with 124.

Manager Tris Speaker made 52 two-base hits, Ruth made 44, Heilmann and his teammate, R. H. Veach, 43 each, and R. Meusel, New York, 40. Howard Shanks, Washington, drove out 19 three-baggers; Tobin and Sisler, 18 each; and Cobb, Ruth and R. Meusel, 16 each. As stated above, Ruth established a new record for home runs with 59, Meusel and K. R. Williams, St. Louis, being tied for second place with 24 each, while Clarence Walker of Philadelphia was third with 23.

Little attention was paid to stealing bases and the sacrifice was not used frequently as in former years for the same reason that prohibited base stealers. Sisler pilfered 35 bases, Harris 29 and Rice 25. W. A. Wambsganss, Cleveland, laid down 43 sacrifices; Owen Bush, Detroit-Washington, 41, McInnis, Boston, 35, and Mulligan, Chicago, 34.

Boston in 1921 again led the American league in fielding with .975, maintaining the record established in 1916. A six-year record of leadership in any single department of play is believed to be unique.

Philadelphia had the greatest number of putouts, 4200. Chicago had the most assists 2124, and was also first in double plays, 155. St. Louis had only seven passed balls and New York eight. Chicago, Washington, St. Louis and Detroit each completed one triple play. This latter feature (four triple plays in one season) is also unprecedented and undoubtedly was made possible by the fact that never before were so many men on bases as was the case last season.

Prominent among the individual records is that of first baseman McInnis of Boston, whose record for the year is .999, he being charged with but one error in 152 games. No other fielding records either in percentage or accepted chances per game were established, though the scoring was unusually liberal. Indeed, the hitting was terrific that the averages of all infielders except first basemen is below normal.

For the third successive season James Dykes of Philadelphia leads the second basemen in accepted chances per game for men playing the position regularly, being especially pressed for that honor by Collins of Chicago, who leads in percentage with .88. Dykes' record is 6.17 chances and Collins' 6.13 per game.

With one exception McInnis also led all rivals in accepted chances at first base with 10.86 per game, the leader being Sheely of Chicago with 11.40.

Howard Shanks, Washington, led the third basemen with .960 percentage in handling 571 chances in 154 games. His record of 3.49 chances at third was also the best. In addition to maintaining his great record of continuous playing, Everett Scott of Boston led the shortstops with the handsome average of .972 and accepted almost six chances per game.

Manager Tris Speaker was first among the outfielders who played regularly, with an average of .984. R. H. Veach of Detroit with 384 putouts and 21 assists was first in accepted chances, while the runner-up was Rice of Washington with 380 putouts and 18 assists.

R. W. Schalk, Chicago, is again first among the catchers, with S. F. O'Neill, Cleveland, second, and E. P. Gharitty, Washington, third, Schalk has now caught more than one thousand games in nine consecutive years.

PITCHERS' RECORDS.

Includes all Pitchers who have worked in 45 or more innings.

American League pitching honors for the 1921 season went to Urban C. Faber, Chicago, who allowed but 2.48 earned runs for each nine innings. Faber worked 331 innings and fewer runs were scored by opponents against Chicago when he pitched than were earned off the second best regular, George Mogridge, Washington, who had a good season. The Chicago star was credited with 25 victories and charged with 15 defeats, a winning average of .625.

Carl Mays and Waite Hoyt of the champion Yankees were third and fourth, respectively, among the regulars, with averages of 3.08 and 3.10. Mays led in percentage of games won with an average of .750, his record reading, 27-9. Urban Shocker of St. Louis also won 27 games, but lost 12, for a record of .692. Mays also led in actual work, pitching 337 innings, six more than Faber.

Shocker won nine straight games in August. Davis of the same team pitched and won a nineteen-inning contest from Washington in which only one man reached first base in the last nine innings. Sam Jones and Joe Bush of Boston, Edwin Kimmel, Philadelphia, and S. Coveleskie, Cleveland, all were effective, while two young left-handers, Cole of Detroit and Bayne of St. Louis, were almost unbeatable during the final month of the season.

Most of the pitchers found it very difficult to cope with the great batters of the league, and the pitching, as a whole, was far less effective than in any previous year. As a result, shutout victories and games of few hits were conspicuous by their rarity, and strikeout records of former years were not approached by the most successful of the twirlers.

The American Association still holds high rank in batting among professional Base Ball organizations. During the past season Kansas City maintained its reputation as the leader among the teams of sluggers, closing with an average of .313. Columbus, in eighth place, had .284, a championship figure only a few years ago.

Kansas City scored 1,148 runs as the result of 1,809 hits, 739 bases on balls, 132 stolen bases, 220 sacrifice hits and the occasional timely errors of opponents. In runs scored, sacrifice hits, and bases on balls, the Blues were first. The champion Colonels made the most hits, 1,864, which included the most two baggers, 342; were second in runs with 1,042; second in three base hits with 112; second in sacrifices, 206, and struck out fewer times (457) than any other team. Minneapolis, finishing second in the race for pennant honors, hit for a total of 2,658 bases, nine more than Kansas City, of which 333 were doubles, 75 triples, and 120 home runs. The Millers led in batting home runs and were second to Louisville in low number of strike-outs, 501.

For individual honors, J. Kirke, first baseman of the champions, led with a record of .386. Kirke scored 125 runs in 168 games and made 282 hits, of which 43 were two bases, 17 triples and 21 home runs. He was tied for second place with Good of Kansas City in driving in runs, with 157. Brief, Kansas City, being first with 191. Kirke struck out only 29 times in 730 trips to the plate. Reb Russell, Minneapolis outfielder, was second to Kirke in batting, with .368, one point in advance of Artie Butler, Kansas City, .367. In 146 games Russell counted 113 runs, made 202 hits, of which 35 were doubles, 18 triples and 33 home runs. In driving in runs he stood fourth, with 132. Anthony Brief, Kansas City first baseman, ranked fourth, six points below his teammate, Butler, with .361. Brief led the league in scoring runs, with 166, one more than Wilbur Good of the same team. Forty-two of Brief's 222 hits were for the round trip, this being the closest approach to Babe Ruth's record that was made during the year. Brief, like Kirke, also hit for more than 400 total bases, his record reading 421, one less than the Colonel. Fifty-one of his blows were doubles, 11 were three-baggers, and he coaxed 117 passes from opposing pitchers, more than any other player. Lear of Milwaukee, and Acosta, Louisville, walked 116 times each, and Zwilling of Kansas City, 115. Besides the players named, Lear, Milwaukee; Thorpe, Toledo; Fisher, Minneapolis; Acosta, Louisville, and Good, Kansas City, were among the first ten batters. Altogether fifty-five men batted .300 or more.

In club fielding the American Association season developed little that was sensational except the large number of double plays. The champion Louisville team made 190; Indianapolis, 186; Kansas City, 154, and Columbus, 150. The Colonels had a fine fielding machine, but the terrific hitting was so difficult to handle that the team average is several points below normal.

The condition that made a high team average difficult of attainment did not prevent many notable individual exploits, and play throughout the year was studded with brilliant performances.

Clarence Covington, first baseman for Indianapolis, accepted 123 assists in 157 games. Young Hauser, sold after the close of the season by Milwaukee to the Athletics, had 1,642 putouts and 101 assists in 167 games, and Brief, in addition to his batting honors, threw out 119 men in 156 games. Kirke, leading batter, also led in putouts, 1,782.

At second base, Betzel of Louisville, accepted the unusual number of 791 chances in 113 games before suffering an injury that put him out for the balance of the season. R. Grimes, Toledo, had 434 putouts and 502 assists, a total of 936 accepted chances in 145 games, and Edward Sicking, Indianapolis, 433 putouts and 505 assists in 147 games.

J. M. Schepner, Louisville, accepted 615 chances at third base in 168 games, with the good average of .956; H. D. Baird, Indianapolis, 515 chances in 158 games, and William McKechnie, Minneapolis, 473 chances in 153 games. On August 1, W. R. Lutzke, Kansas City, had two putouts and ten assists at third base, without an error, in a nine-inning game.

Among the shortstops, James E. Cooney, Milwaukee, was first, with 367 putouts and 623 assists in 162 games, giving him an average of .960. His 990 accepted chances in 162 games is very close to a world's record. Henry Schreiber, Indianapolis, had 891 chances in 153 games, and B. A. Ballenger, Louisville, 817 in 151 games.

Wilbur Good, Kansas City, caught 450 flies and threw out 16 men, a total of 466 chances in 164 games in the outfield. Roy Massey, Louisville, had 335 putouts and 20 assists; A. Wickland, Toledo, 328 putouts and 25 assists in 156 games, and A. J. Hill, Toledo, 312 putouts and 21 assists in 127 games. Among the catchers, Leo Dixon, Indianapolis, threw out 139 men; Nick Allen, St. Paul, 131, and Walter Mayer, Minneapolis, 112.

He had the slugging Blues to make the runs for him. Koob of Louisville, won 22 games; Bedient, of Toledo, 20 and C. Hall, St. Paul, 20, these being the only pitchers other than those named to win 20 or more games.

Danforth struck out 204 opponents, allowed 114 bases on balls and hit 25 men. Robertson, Minneapolis, was second in strikeouts with 175, and Bono, Kansas City, third with 146. Bono handed out 167 passes, being more generous than any of his rivals, Koob being second with 119, and Lowdermilk and Merritt tied at 117 each. Lowdermilk gave 12 bases on balls in one game and won easily, his victims making but two hits.

R. E. Clark, Columbus, pitched the only no-hit game of the season. Virgil Barnes, Milwaukee, pitched two one-hit games; Long, Louisville, two two-hit contests; Danforth, Merritt and Sanders each two three-hit games; while Barnes, Bedient and Ames each pitched four-hit games.

D. C. Danforth, with the eighth place Columbus team, was the leading pitcher of the Association. He worked 229 innings in 44 games, and allowed only 97 earned runs, an average of 2.66 per game. Danforth won 25 games and was charged with 16 defeats; percentage, .610. Ben Tincup, Louisville, playing most of the time in the outfield, pitched and won nine games and did not lose a contest. He was second to Danforth in the standing with an earned run average of 2.84.

Tillar Cavet, Indianapolis, was in 48 games and pitched 331 innings, with an earned run average of 3.29 and a won and lost record of 23, 16, .590. C. Hall, St. Paul, pitched 306 innings; Paul Carter, Kansas City, 303 innings, and C. C. Robertson, Minneapolis, R. Wright, Toledo, and Gus Bono, Kansas City, each worked 300 innings.

Bono, Kansas City, tied Danforth in games won, with 25, and lost only 11, but allowed 4.68 earned runs per game.

Rocky Mount and Wilson were tied for first place when season closed, but Wilson, failing to win a played-over game with Richmond, dropped down to second place, having won 38 and lost 26 for a percentage of .594. Later both clubs were thrown out for being over the salary limit and Portsmouth was awarded the pennant by winning four out of the five post-season games.

STANDING OF CLUBS AT CLOSE OF SEASON.

Frederick	58	38	.604	Martinsburg	44	49	.473

Waynesboro	52	45	.536	Hagerstown	30	58	.341

INDIVIDUAL BATTING.

NOTE—In compiling batting averages for the season it is customary to credit hits of all kinds in the hit column. In the averages which follow, a different system has been used. To illustrate: Day of Frederick made 53 singles, 15 two-base hits, 3 three-base hits and 2 home runs, a total of 73 hits, and the batting percentage and total base columns are therefore correct. The editor feels that this explanation is necessary to clear any misunderstanding which may arise among those who make a study of batting figures and compute them in the regular way.

PART II

College Base Ball in 1921

BY EDWARD B. MOSS, NEW YORK.

EDWARD B. MOSS.

High class college Base Ball play was not confined to any particular section of the country during the season of 1921. In almost every geographical sector of the nation some college or university team stood out as a combination of exceptional strength, and in some localities there were several teams of unusual merit. Had it been possible to bring these 'varsity teams together in a final series, the resultant play undoubtedly would have approached close to the best standards of the professional game.

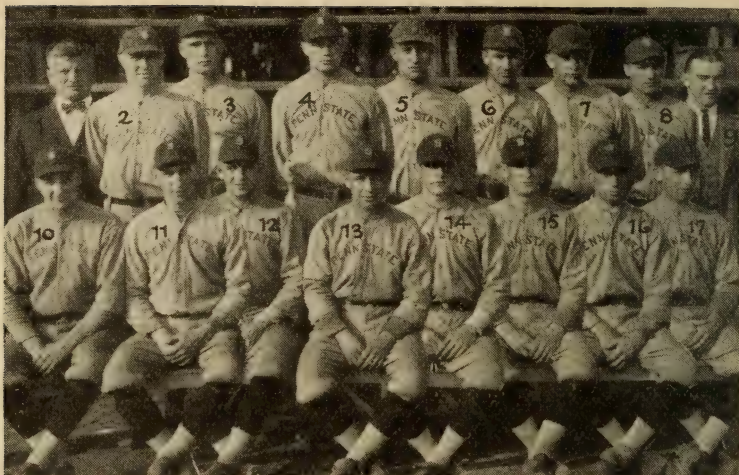

Pennsylvania State and Holy Cross represented the East with teams of high caliber. In the Middle West the Universities of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, Washash College, Iowa State and Notre Dame, all played well above the average. The South presented teams of high class in Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, West Virginia University, Wake Forest College, Alabama Poly and Virginia Poly. The Rocky Mountain section had two teams of exceptional ability in the University of Montana, which won its eighteen-game schedule without suffering defeat, and the University of Nebraska. In the Southwest, Texas Christian University and the University of Texas were outstanding leaders, while on the Pacific Coast Washington State, Oregon Aggies and University of Washington played winning Base Ball.

Considering the Eastern section alone, the palm must be awarded to Holy Cross and Penn State. These two teams did not meet upon the diamond and there is little in their records to indicate that one was superior to the other. Holy Cross played thirty-two games, winning twenty-nine, losing two and tying one. Penn State played twenty-five games, won twenty-two and lost three. Yale and Lehigh scored close victories over Holy Cross and the strong Georgetown nine held the Worcester collegians to a twelve-inning tie at 4-4. Yale was defeated in the two other games which formed the series of three, and Georgetown also lost a second game to Holy Cross. Princeton, Harvard, Catholic University, Dartmouth, Tufts, Syracuse and many other Eastern college teams bowed to the Worcester team.

Penn State started with a rush which threatened to break all Eastern collegiate Base Ball records. Twenty games were won in a row before the University of Pennsylvania checked the Nittany Lions with a 4-2 defeat. Pittsburgh also won the final two games of the schedule, 12-8 and 10-7, giving Penn State a season's record of twenty-two victories out of twenty-five games. As the 1920 'varsity team closed its season with a run of eleven straight games, Penn State achieved a score of thirty-one straight victories, a record which will probably stand for some time. Penn State victories included defeats of Georgetown, Princeton, Yale, Virginia, Lehigh, Detroit and the Navy.

Georgetown, Yale, Catholic University, Lafayette, Dartmouth, Harvard, Boston College, Princeton, Massachusetts Aggies, Tufts, Pittsburgh and Army were closely grouped in the second division. All of these college nines won approximately two-thirds of their games in schedules ranging from thirty-four games down to fifteen contests. Harvard defeated Yale and Princeton in the triangular series, and Princeton won two out of three games from Yale. The Army season was marked by a most satisfactory climax when the West Pointers won the final game of the year from the Naval Academy, 8 to 7.

Georgetown's season was notable for seven shutouts in sixteen victories. What is believed to be a collegiate record was established by Captain Kenyon, catcher of the Georgetown team, who batted three home runs in succession in the game with the University of North Carolina. He also made a double and a single in his other two trips to the plate. Eight home runs in eighteen games is another mark which he set. On April 15, Sam Hyman, Georgetown's pitching ace, just missed getting into the no-hit class when, with two men out in the ninth inning, Wolback of Lafayette connected for his team's only hit. Another pitcher, Del Bissonette, struck out thirty-eight men in the last three games of the season which he pitched, eleven against Bethany, thirteen against Lebanon Valley and fourteen against Lafayette.

The records of some of the leading Eastern 'varsity teams with only a general effort at grouping, follow:

In the Middle West, Illinois and Michigan had a thrilling race for Conference honors. Illinois finally won with ten victories and one defeat, giving a percentage of .909, while Michigan was a very close second, winning ten and losing two games for a percentage of .833. Wisconsin was third with .667 and Ohio State fourth with .600. Considering the schedules as a whole, Michigan had a slight margin on Illinois, winning twenty-one out of twenty-five games, whereas Illinois won seventeen out of twenty. The two leaders broke even in their own two-game series. Two of Michigan's four defeats were administered by Southern teams early in the spring when the Universities of Alabama and Georgia took the Wolverines into camp. Wisconsin and Illinois won the other victories by a one-run margin. Alabama also defeated Illinois, as did the Mississippi Aggies and Michigan. Both Illinois and Michigan played some of the strongest teams of the South and Middle West, and their victories included shutouts of Waseda University of Japan by the same score, 1 to 0.

Wisconsin, Wabash, Iowa State, Missouri and Notre Dame were the other strong teams of the section. Wisconsin lost an eighteen-inning game to Michigan by 7 to 8 and a thirteen-inning contest to Illinois by the same score. Indiana shut out the Badgers, 1 to 0, and lost the second game, 0—2. Notre Dame was defeated, 6—2, and tied Wisconsin, 3—3. Rose Poly, DePauw and Indiana were the only teams to defeat Wabash, and each in turn lost one or more games to Wabash. Virtually all of Notre Dame's defeats were at the hands of Conference teams. The University of Nebraska and Washington University appeared to be Iowa State's nemesis.

In the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association the team representing Kalamazoo College finished at the top. Albion was a good second. The final standing of the teams follows:

	Won.	Lost.	PC.		Won.	Lost.	PC.
Kalamazoo	6	2	.750	Olivet	2	3	.400
Albion	7	4	.636	Hillsdale	2	3	.400

BROWN UNIVERSITY, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The strong 'varsity nines of the South included Alabama Poly, Georgia Tech, Vanderbilt, Virginia Poly, Wake Forest, Georgia and West Virginia. Several won seventy-five per cent of their games. Alabama Poly lost to Yale, 1—4, and to Georgia Tech, 3—8. Two of the remaining four defeats were administered by the Toronto International League professionals. Navy played a 2—2 tie with Georgia Tech, and Oglethorpe, Georgetown, Maryland and North Carolina, each won a game from Tech. Tennessee scored three of the six defeats credited to Vanderbilt's record. Three of the five games lost by Wake Forest were won by professional opponents. Eastern college teams won four of the seven games lost by West Virginia out of twenty-seven played.

The University of Montana won eighteen straight games and closed its Rocky Mountain season without defeat. Six college opponents figured in the schedule of repeated games and all were outclassed by Montana. The University of Nebraska broke even in a series with Iowa State and Kansas Aggies and generally outclassed her other rivals.

In the Southwest, Texas Christian University played impressive Base Ball, winning twenty-one out of twenty-three games. Opposing the strongest college nines of the section, Texas Christian won eighteen games straight and scored seven shutouts. Tarleton and Southwestern Methodist University were the only two teams to win. The University of Texas lost five out of nineteen games and tied another. The Chicago Americans accounted for two of the defeats, winning 15—12 and 7—3, while on the spring training trip.

On the Pacific Coast, Washington State College made an excellent record, winning twenty-two out of twenty-seven games. Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Oregon Aggies were the only teams to defeat Washington State, and only Washington succeeded in winning two games from the Pullmanites. Arizona won a two out of three series from University of Southern California, the only setback sustained by the latter team except a defeat by Pomona.

The University of California played a schedule of thirty-four games, which included a trip to the Orient. Of the twenty-one games on its domestic schedule California won twelve, lost eight and tied one. Stanford was defeated in all three contests and Santa Clara was beaten two out of three, the third game being called at the end of the tenth inning with the score a tie at three runs each. All of California's defeats were administered by independent and professional teams.

On its Oriental trip California won nine games and lost four. The strong All-Chinese team of Honolulu was played on both the outgoing and incoming voyages and the teams broke even, California winning the first and losing the second contest. The balance of its matches were played in Tokio, Japan, and California was successful against all opponents except Keio University, which won three of the four games played. Stanford University won eleven games of eighteen scheduled. In addition to the defeats by California, Stanford lost a game to St. Mary's College, but won the entire series from Santa Clara. Like California, most of Stanford's opponents were teams outside the collegiate fold.

The University of Washington's trip to Japan in the fall was another successful venture. Twenty-three victories and eight defeats was the final result of the tour. The most important series were played with Waseda and Keio Universities. Waseda held the visitors to close scores and won four out of nine games. Keio was beaten three games straight.

The Southern California Conference had a well-balanced schedule, six teams taking part in the race. Pomona led the field at the finish, with Redlands close up. Following is the final standing of the teams:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.		Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Pomona	7	3	.700	U. of Cal. So. Br.	5	5	.500
Redlands	6	4	.600	Whittier	4	6	.400

Base Ball in the Western Conference

The 1921 Western Conference Base Ball competition was one of the most spirited and most interesting in years. The standard of play was much better than had been seen for a long time. As the majority of the positions on the various Conference teams were held by sophomore and junior players, the Conference should enjoy better Base Ball in 1922.

Illinois won the championship, losing only one game during the season. Michigan finished second, losing a chance to claim the title with Illinois when they were beaten on the last game of their schedule by Wisconsin, giving them a total of ten victories and two defeats. Wisconsin and Ohio State finished in the order named and both universities had excellent teams. They relinquished the lead to Illinois after some furious extra-inning games.

The feature of the Conference season was the unusual number of good pitchers who were developed. Illinois, under the guidance of Carl Lundgren, former Chicago National pitcher, starting with inexperienced talent, brought out one of the strongest groups of pitchers that ever has represented the college.

Barnes, a diminutive left-hander, pitched the first game of the season, against Northwestern without a hit, walk, or run charged against him and threw only 78 balls in nine innings. He continued brilliantly throughout the season and could be relied on to stop the most furious batting rallies of opponents.

To Jackson, a big right-hander, fell the bulk of the work. He was one of the leading pitchers in the Conference and one of the best college twirlers seen in years. His work against Ohio State, Wisconsin, and Michigan marked him as a fine player. With the championship at stake, he held these teams helpless, allowing only a few scattered hits and disposing of their best batters with ease.

Dixon of Michigan was another pitcher of unusual merit. Under the guidance of Ray Fisher, former New York American pitcher, he developed rapidly and won the majority of his games with ease. Good control, coupled with a deliberate, puzzling delivery, made him master of the situation during most of the games. Fish of Ohio State and Crisler of Chicago gave brilliant exhibitions of pitching, but were very erratic at times.

Illinois led the league in batting, by hitting .289 as a team for the season. Vogel, the husky center-fielder, batted for a .437 percentage. His seven home runs, three triples and two doubles helped materially in the Illinois games. He hit safely in every contest played during the spring training trip and Conference season. McCurdy batted for a percentage of .429 and hit safely in all games but one during the year. Mee, who went to the Detroit Americans at the end of the Conference season, was the leading runmaker, and led the team in the number of stolen bases.

Shackelford and Perrin were the leading hitters for Michigan and were always dangerous with men on bases. Elliott and Williams of Wisconsin finished well up in the batting averages and helped start the Badgers in many of their batting rallies. Hoffman and Slyker of Ohio State batted consistently and broke up several games in behalf of the Buckeye school.

"The most successful Base Ball season that the Conference ever enjoyed," was the unanimous opinion of those who had followed the games in previous years. The standing of the teams at the close of the 1921 season follows:

Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.	Team.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Illinois	10	1	.909	Purdue	4	7	.364
Michigan	10	2	.833	Chicago	3	9	.250

Lafayette-Lehigh Series

Except the Harvard-Yale and Princeton-Yale series in College Base Ball, the series between Lafayette and Lehigh is oldest of all. It began in 1872 with brimming scores. Lafayette won from Lehigh, 34 to 16 and 88 to 20 that year. A generous afternoon, but even in later years there were scores in which one side or the other made more than twenty runs. When the annual series is played this year it will be the fifty-first season of Base Ball between these doughty old rivals. In all they have played 110 games and Lafayette has won 70, Lehigh 39, and one resulted in a tie. Lafayette has won 25 series to Lehigh's 13, with three series tied. Lafayette has won ten shutouts and Lehigh six. The Base Ball record of the colleges is as follows:

Chicago Schoolboys Defeat New York

BY EDWARD B. MOSS, NEW YORK.

The Chicago-New York interscholastic athletic competition last season included a Base Ball game between the high school championship teams of the two cities. Chicago was represented by the Lane Technical High School team and New York by George Washington High School. Chicago's schoolboy champions won, 9 to 5, in an exciting game played at South Field, the Columbia University diamond, Saturday, June 18.

The Base Ball season of 1921 was the greatest that the Chicago high schools ever enjoyed. The city was divided into four sections, the winning teams in each section playing each other once for the title. For the second year in succession, Lane Technical High School won the championship without losing a league game, and was selected for the Eastern trip.

The game attracted a large gathering of interscholastic sport followers. Gen. George W. Wingate, president of the Public Schools Athletic League of Greater New York, threw out the first ball. Other important guests of the occasion included members of the Italian and Japanese consulates, Mayor Ryan and other city officials.

George Washington High School started its scoring early. In its half of the first Thompson singled to short and went to second when Budach threw wildly over Deinhardt's head. Severance tried to sacrifice, but was safe when Ryrholm's throw to first was poor. Thompson scored when Deinhardt played badly to third. The New York boys scored again in the second. Waterbury doubled to right and went to third on McCann's out. He scored on Schwartz's single to short.

Lane went ahead in the sixth when Deinhardt hit a homer to left, Stevenson singled and scored on Kraft's triple, and that individual scored on Thompson's error of Budach's tap. Washington immediately regained the lead when four hits by McCann, Stuart, Thompson and Severance sent the team two across with another pair of tallies.

Lane evened matters in the seventh when Christman made the second home run for the Chicago team. Each team scored a run in the eighth. Stevenson opened for Lane with a single and immediately stole second. Kraft struck out and then Lang, pinch hitting for Marquard, sent a neat single to short, who fumbled it and allowed Stevenson to score. McCann's single, Schwartz's free trip and Thompson's single sent a run across for the locals. The Chicago schoolboys won in the ninth when a walk, two hits and a pair of errors helped them to score four runs. The score:

Fielders' Gloves

No. AAH

No. AAH. "Legion." We emphasize in this new 1922 glove, the double palm consisting of two pieces of same grade of leather cemented together, practically doubling the life of the glove, care being taken to retain the flexibility of leather so necessary in a fielder's glove. Like all of our fielders' gloves, it has the patented diverted seams between the fingers, a most important factor in its wearing qualities. The leather is the best selected brown horsehide. Full leather lining, lacing at wrist, and all the refinements of makeup that this class of glove calls for.....Each, $8.00

No. AAL. "Winner." Also a new 1922 model. Choicest tan horsehide glove leather, with brown leather roll binding; lined with fine glove leather. No. AAL has a deep pocket with but little padding in center of palm, but heel and edges are well padded. Adjustable padding. We forecast this glove as a popular pro model.....Each, $7.00

No. BBH. "Honor." A standard professional model. Drab glove horsehide leather, suede finish. Lining is also of horsehide, equal in quality to the outer shell, giving this glove wonderful wearing qualities. Wrist is laced for adjustable padding. Brown leather trim.....Each, $7.00

No. BBI. "World Series." Similar to No. BBH, with the exception of the lining, which is glove leather instead of horsehide. Leather lined throughout, welted seams, chocolate color binding.....Each, $6.00

No. PXL. "Professional." Special drab suede finished horsehide of soft texture and great durability; leather lined; web thumb. Hand made padding, light in center of palm, well proportioned elsewhere. The original, wide little finger model...Each, $5.50

No. SS. "Short Finger." Made up of same kind of material as in PXL, but differing in model. No. SS has shorter and wider fingers, palm lightly padded, with a medium amount in other essential parts. Full, deep pocket. Popular pro model....Each, $5.50

No. XLW. "League Special." Regulation professional style. Light brown horsehide, leather grained finish. Full lined; laced wrist; diverted seams; web thumb. No. XLW has wide little finger, special hand made, medium padding in heel and fingers and light in center.....Each, $5.50

Spalding's Official Base Ball Record

1922

Records of Previous Years

Containing a complete tabulated review of information pertaining to organized Base Ball, from the time of the inception of the first league, as well as statistics of the past which are invaluable to enthusiasts and admirers of America's national game.

Edited by John B. Foster

Compiled by Charles D. White

Attention is called to the thorough and careful condensation which has been made of Base Ball history in order that the Record shall be able to present to its readers the greatest amount of information in the smallest space. In the pages which follow, facts are accurately stated which would require reference to more than thirty volumes if they were to be ascertained without the assistance of Spalding's Official Base Ball Record.

Convenient Detachable Pocket Size for Ready Reference

To remove this section from book, pry up wire stitch on back cover and it can be taken out without mutilating.

GRAND NATIONAL ALL-AMERICA BASE BALL TEAM

Players on National Championship Teams who have played in one position in 50 games (pitchers 25 games) or over and whose combined records of Fielding and Batting (pitchers' record includes Percentage of Victories, Fielding and Batting) rank the highest in each position covering the period of fifty-one years, from the commencement of Professional Base Ball in 1871 to 1921, inclusive.

[NOTE.—The All-America Teams are made up of players in Champion Teams and not necessarily on best records.]

Right Field— WM. KEELER Baltimore	1896	127973	.392	1.365
Total Average.....899	.940	.377	1.416

* Wm. Keeler played center field on the Brooklyn team of 1899, and in this position had a record in fielding of .970 and in batting of .376, a total of 1.346, which would entitle him to the center field position on the Grand National "All-America" Team, but as he had a higher record as right fielder of the Baltimore team in 1896, the center field was given to Hugh Duffy of Boston with the next highest record of 1.336. A clerical error was made in the Record Book of 1908, in placing Hugh Jennings' name in the shortstop position on the Grand National "All-America" Team, with his splendid record of .943 in fielding and .386 in batting, totaling 1.329, instead of Geo. Wright, with his still more remarkable record of .940 in fielding and .422 in batting, totaling 1.362.

COMPILED BY ERNEST J. LANIGAN.

Post-season games for the world's Base Ball championship were inaugurated in 1884, when the Providence club of the National League defeated the Metropolitans of New York, representing the American Association, three games straight.

The annual contests between the National League and American Association champions continued until 1890, but because the series were played under varying rule conditions and the number of games differed each year records made during that period cannot uniformly be compared with those made under the present rules which govern the world series. For that reason the compiler has added the modern record to any which may have been made during those years.

In 1892 the National League played a divided season and the winners of each half met in a play-off series to decide the championship. From 1892 until 1897 the Temple Cup series was played to give the winner and runner up in the National League race an opportunity to earn a financial reward by playing on the grounds of each home club after the season. It was expressly stipulated that no championship was involved, the title already having been determined.

The first meeting between champion clubs of the National and American Leagues occurred in 1903, but in 1905 the John T. Brush Rules governing the world series were formulated and since that time the series have been played under a uniform code.

*No attempts made to stop steals.

Seldom score in all of the nine innings.

It seldom happens in Base Ball that a team tallies in every inning of a game. Two major league contests in which the winners scored in each of the nine innings follow:

At Cleveland, August 15, 1889, Cleveland vs. Boston.

Cleveland	1	1	3	2	1	6	1	3	1-19
Boston	0	4	0	1	1	1	0	0	1-8

At Washington, June 22, 1894, Washington vs. Boston.

Washington	4	1	7	4	2	4	1	1	2-26
Boston	2	1	1	0	0	2	4	2	0-12

At Chicago, June 29, 1897, Chicago vs. Louisville.

Chicago	3	5	7	1	2	1	2	7	8-36
Louisville	0	0	1	0	5	0	1	0	0-7

In both of the foregoing games the home team went to bat first.

On July 24, 1901, the Pittsburgh Nationals defeated Cincinnati at Pittsburgh, the Pirates scoring in every inning but the ninth, which they did not have to play.

	Cincinnati	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0-2

Boston defeated Cleveland A.L., September 16, 1903, at Boston, also scoring in every inning but the ninth. Score:

Cleveland	0	3	4	0	0	0	0	0	0-7

Pitchers—T. Hughes, N. Gibson, Boston; E. Killian, F. Donahue, Cleveland.

September 9, 1916, the scoring was peculiar in the Detroit-St. Louis game, being as follows:

Detroit	1	1	3	3	2	2	0	0	0-12
St. Louis	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	3	3-8

Pitchers—H. Coveleskie; C. Weillman, D. Davenport and E. Hamilton.

Three two-base hits and four home runs in seven consecutive times at bat.

September 4, 1921, at Detroit, Elmer Smith, Cleveland A.L., made a two-base hit in the sixth inning, received a base on balls in the seventh, and batted a home run in the eighth. In the morning game of September 5, at Cleveland, he batted home runs in the first and third innings, walked in the fifth, and hit for two bases in the seventh. In the afternoon game the same day he made a two-bagger in the first inning and a home run in the fourth. His next three trips to the plate resulted in a base on balls in the fifth inning, a sacrifice fly in the seventh, and another base in balls in the eighth. As bases on balls and sacrifice flies are not counted as "times at bat," Smith scored a total of twenty-two bases in seven successive times at bat, an average of 3.14 bases. Three of the four home runs which he scored were made consecutively.

Scores three runners twice in same game with two doubles.

Harry H. Davis, New York, vs. Brooklyn N.L., with three men on bases in the fifth and ninth innings, hit a two-bagger in each inning and scored the three runners, June 27, 1896, at New York.

Player scores ten runs in two successive games.

John Irwin, Buffalo Players' League, scored five runs April 19 and achieved the same result April 21, 1890. April 20 fell on Sunday.

Consecutive games batting.

G. Hecker, Louisville, 1886.

In the National Association, on June 18, 1874, the Mutuals of Brooklyn scored 36 runs, Chicago 1.

The first shutout game in the National League—Chicago 4, Louisville 0—A. G. Spalding pitching for Chicago, was played at Louisville, April 25, 1876.

In the first extra inning game in the National League, Hartford defeated Boston, at Boston 3-2, 10 innings, April 29, 1876.

August 20, 1886, Baltimore vs. Athletics A.A., score 1-0, each club made only one hit. Same performance July 4, 1906—Chicago 1, vs. Pittsburgh N.L. 0.

Most successive hits by one National League club.

Teams hitless for nine innings but not no-hit games.

When Jesse J. Haines of the St. Louis Cardinals was beaten by Grover Cleveland Alexander of the Cubs in 17 innings on October 1, 1920, by a score of 3-2, he turned the Chicagoans back hitless for 9½ innings. Merkle doubled with two down in the sixth, and no hits were made until Mariott singled with one gone in the sixteenth, so Haines had a record of 9½ innings of hitless ball. On May 11, 1919, Walter Johnson of Washington held the New York A.L. club to two hits in 12 innings at New York—singles by Peckinpah with one out in the first and by Pratt with none out in the eleventh. This gave Johnson a record of 9½ innings of hitless ball. The game resulted in a runless tie. Waite C. Hoyt of the Red Sox practically duplicated Johnson's performance on September 24 of the same year in the same city. In an extra-inning game against Shawkey, Pipp tripled and Pratt sacrifice flied in the thirteenth. From the third to the thirteenth Hoyt pitched perfect ball, no one getting on.

An odd game and an unnecessary question.

In a ten-inning tie game between St. Louis and Philadelphia N.L., May 13, 1913, the Cardinals got two hits in the first inning and that was all, but they were good for three runs, coupled with a base on balls. One was a homer by Cruise. After the first inning Oeschger pitched nine without allowing a hit. Someone has asked, "Does that entitle him to a no-hit game?"

Relief pitchers retire side on strikes.

Ed Walsh, Chicago A.L., relieving Lange, who walked the first man, retired the side on strikes, April 13, 1913.

W. Johnson, Washington, relieving Gallia in the ninth inning, fanned Bush, Kavanaugh and Vitt of Detroit A.L., July 25, 1915. Coveleskie, Cleveland, relieving the pitcher in the ninth inning, fanned Oldring, Schang and Stellbauer of Philadelphia A.L. in succession, June 12, 1916. E. A. Rommel, Philadelphia, relieving Scott Perry in the eighth inning, fanned G. H. Ruth, D. B. Pratt and R. Meusel of New York A.L. in succession, September 7, 1920.

Double play on attempted double steal.

F. Crossin, St. Louis, threw out Crawford, Detroit A.L., at second, and Cobb was caught trying to score from third, Pratt to Crossin; third inning, April 25, 1914. N. Len, Cincinnati, threw out Southworth Pittsburgh N.L., at second base and Carey was caught trying to score from third, Lee Magee to Allen; sixth inning, July 4, 1918. F. O'Neill, Cleveland, threw out T. R. Cobb, Detroit A.L., at second base, and even Bush was caught trying to score from third, Wambsganss to O'Neill; fourth inning, May 4, 1920.

Eight pitchers used by one club in a single game.

A. Williams, Bentley, Griffith, Engel, Johnson, Schaefer, Ainsmith and Gedeon, Washington, pitched against Boston A.L. (Anderson alone) and won 10—9, October 1913.

Pitcher catches base-runner off first and makes putout.

Doak, St. Louis, caught Carey, Pittsburgh N.L., off first base and tagged him for a putout, June 24, 1916.

An odd putout.

Haley, Philadelphia A.L., forced at second by Witt on ball that hit Pitcher Umbeth's glove and Second Baseman Wambsganss' shin, was put out by Shortstop Chapman, September 13, 1916.

Scores from second base on sacrifice fly.

George Ruth, Boston, hit a tremendous fly to right which Gilhooly, New York A.L., caught up against the bleacher wall. It was such a mighty drive that Scott scored on second and Ruth got credit for a sacrifice fly. Afternoon game, April 19, 1918. Other players who have made same play: Charles Jones, Washington, on ball hit to F. Hinchman, left fielder of Cleveland A.L., by Charles Hickman, May 18, 1907; Fred Clarke, Pittsburgh, on ball hit to James Scheckard, left fielder of Chicago N.L., by Hans Wagner, June 30, 1907; Tyrus Cobb, Detroit, on ball hit to R. Oldring, center fielder of Philadelphia A.L., by Sam Crawford, July 11, 1911; R. Oldring, Philadelphia, on ball hit to Bert Daniels, right fielder of New York A.L., by E. T. Collins, September 12, 1911; Bert Daniels, Cincinnati, on ball hit to Josh Devore, right fielder of Boston N.L., by Charles Herzog, August 8, 1914; Edward Foster, Washington, on ball hit to Armando Marsans, center fielder of St. Louis A.L., by Elmer Smith, May 1917; Tris Speaker, Cleveland, on ball hit to Oscar Felsch, center fielder of Chicago A.L., by Robert Roth, June 30, 1917; Frank Frisch, New York, on ball hit to Southworth, right fielder of Pittsburgh N.L., by Lee King, August 31, 1920; E. S. Rice, Washington, on ball hit to Tris Speaker, Cleveland A.L., by Edward Miller, June 12, 1921.

Boston vs. New York N.L., May 27, 1920, had 26 men left on bases—first game, 12; second game, 12; total, 26 for the day.

Outfielder makes two double plays unassisted.

Tris Speaker, Cleveland A.L., made an unassisted double play in the Cleveland-Detroit game of April 18, 1918. He trapped a fly ball in the ninth inning, ran in and tagged Vitt, who hesitated between second and third, and then stepped on the base forcing Ellison. Speaker duplicated this feat in the Cleveland-Chicago game of April 29.

Nine hits by nine players.

In the game with Cincinnati, May 27, 1921, Pittsburgh made nine hits, each player making one.

Nine runs by nine players.

A major league game in which each of the nine players scored one run was played in the American League, May 7, 1901, Detroit making this unusual record against Milwaukee.

Four hits and a base on balls in one inning, yet no run scored.

Brooklyn at Boston, June 27, 1912, last half of ninth inning, Brooklyn leading, 1 to 8. McDonald, first up, went out; Campbell singled and was caught off first, Ruck to Daubert; Sweeney and Kirke singled; Titus drew a base on balls; Houser b. between first and second, and Titus, trying to block Daubert in fielding the ball, was hit by the boulder, retiring the side, Houser being credited with a hit.

Starts and finishes the season with a home run.

Elmer Smith, Cleveland, batted a home run against St. Louis, April 13, opening game, and home run against Chicago, October 2, 1921, the closing game.

Two safe hits in one time at bat.

New York A.L. at Boston, June 29, 1912, second inning, second game. Gardner tripled; Stahl doubled; Wagner sacrificed; Cady hit safely and Stahl ran home. Umpire Frank O'Loughlin ruled that Stahl had scored on a balk and sent Cady back to the batter's box. Cady thereupon drove out a double.

The first man to steal second base when that bag was occupied.

John Anderson, Washington vs. Baltimore N.L., was the first major leaguer to steal second base when that bag was occupied by a runner, June 14, 1896.

Kilroy, Baltimore vs. Philadelphia A.A., struck out 16 men, but lost the game, 3-2, August 24, 1886.

Gilmore, Washington vs. St. Louis N.L., with 16 strikeouts loses game, 5-3, September 28, 1886.

Opposing catcher borrowed to finish game.

In the final game of a double-header between Louisville and Toledo, July 21, 1911, Catcher Kelly of Toledo had the unusual experience of catching for both teams. Walter Meyer had been injured and Louisville was without a catcher, as Kocher had left after the first game, so Kelly was borrowed to finish the second game for the Colonels.

Two home runs in one inning by same player.

On June 10, 1880, Buffalo at Boston, C. Jones, Boston, made two home runs in the eighth, his team scoring ten times in that inning. Buffalo ran up nineteen errors, Esterbrook being the only player on the team with a clean fielding record. On May 30, 1894, Cincinnati at Boston, Robert Lowe of Boston made two home runs in a 9th inning, off Chamberlain, in the afternoon contest. Lowe hit four home runs in this game.

Unusual pitching feats.

Rube Waddell, pitching his first game for Philadelphia A.L., July 1, 1902, in three innings—the third, sixth and ninth, retired the same three batsmen, W. Gilbert H. Howell and J. Cronin, New York, on strikes. In one inning Waddell pitched only nine balls, retiring the side. Only 27 men batted against him during the game.

V. Johnson, Washington A.L., shut out New York, September 4, 5 and 7, 1908, three in succession, pitching 27 innings, without a run.

W. Bradley, St. Louis N.L., shut out Hartford in 27 consecutive innings, July 12, 13, 1876, allowing four hits the first day, five hits the second day, and no hits the third day.

Reulbach, Chicago N.L., pitched a double-header against Brooklyn, September 1908, and shut out the latter in both games.

First four years of the Boston Nationals, 1871-1875, A. G. Spalding pitched all the games.

Charles Radbourne, Providence N.L., 1884, pitched in 77 games (74 championship, 3 old series), of which he won 63, lost 12, tied 2. From July 23 to September 26, inclusive, with the exception of August 2, 8 and 20, and September 25, Radbourne pitched every game played by Providence; total, 36 games. He won 31, lost 4 and tied 1, pitching 22 in succession and winning 18 consecutive games.

T. ("Cy") Young had a unique record, 22 consecutive years in major leagues, pitched 3 no-hit games; pitched 45 innings without being scored upon.

Three pinch hitters struck out in succession.

Pitcher Joe Wood, Boston, relieving Ed Karger who had been injured, fanned three pinch hitters in succession in the Chicago vs. Boston A.L. game, at Boston, June 5, 1902. Wood started the ninth inning with a one-run lead, and Boston won the game, 4 to 1. The Chicago players who were struck out were Pat Dougherty, batting for Dan Corhan; Fred Payne, batting for Billy Sullivan; Jimmy Block, batting for Frank Stead.

Gives few bases on balls during season.

B. Adams, Pittsburgh N.L., in 1919, gave 23 bases on balls to 1017 batsmen in 1017 innings. In 1920, he gave only 18 bases on balls to 1,035 batsmen in 263 innings.

Loses game on first ball pitched.

With the score a tie in the ninth inning, May 18, 1921, Chicago vs. New York N.L., Ed Smith batted the first ball pitched by Elwood G. Martin into the upper tier of the right field stands. Martin was the last of a long array of Chicago pitchers to enter the contest, and the fact that he lost the game by pitching only one ball, probably constitutes a record.

W. Schriver, Chicago N.L., on August 29, 1894, on second attempt, caught a ball thrown from top of Washington Monument. Charles E. Street, catcher Washington N.L., August 28, 1908, caught a ball pitched from the window at top of Washington Monument, distance 542 feet; estimated when ball reached his hands it was traveling a velocity of 161 feet a second. William D. Sullivan, catcher Chicago A.L., August 24, 1910, caught three balls thrown from Washington Monument.

Unusual fielding incident.

Albert Nixon, Boston vs. Pittsburgh N.L., played all three outfield positions and made three putouts in each, September 12, 1921.

Unusual scoring feat.

William Wambsganss and Charles Jamieson, Cleveland vs. St. Louis A.L., September 1921, scored nine of their team's ten runs—Wambsganss five, Jamieson four. No previous record of any two players making such a proportion of their club's runs.

Shortest post-season game.

Under 8 minutes, New York N.L. 4, New York A.L. 1, October 13, 1914.

One day's remarkable totals.

On May 11, 1911, 126 runs and 177 base hits were made in the major leagues. National League made 75 runs and 91 hits; American League made 51 runs and 86 hits.

Went through season without a defeat.

Cincinnati Reds, in 1869, went through season without a defeat, winning 81 games.

Long distance throw.

John Hatfield, at Brooklyn, N. Y., October 15, 1872, distance 400 feet 7 1-2 inches. Throw of Sheldon Lejeune, 426 feet 9 1-2 inches, at Cincinnati, October 12, 1910, 1 day, was accepted as a record by the authorities.

Fungo hitting records.

Circling
the bases.

Player Archdeacon of Rochester, International League, circled bases in 13 2-5 seconds, at Rochester, Sept. 2, 1921. Tim Thomas F. Keane, athletic director Syracuse University; H. L. Dadmun, former A.A.U. half-mile champion, and Harry F. New York A.C. (H. Lobert's record at Cincinnati is 13 4-5 seconds).

Record for continuous playing championship games.

Perry Lipe has a remarkable record for continuous playing, viz.: Greenville, Miss., 1903; Macon, Ga., 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, Richmond, Va., 1908, 1909; during this period he participated in every championship game, missing only one inning, the ninth inning of game of June 10, 1909, when he was put out of the game; during these seven years he officiated as manager in 1906-7-8-9.

Greatest number bases.

111 in 123 games—O. Nicholson, Frankfort, Blue Grass League, 1912.
105 in 135 games—W. H. Zimmerman, Utica, New York State League, 1910.

Long service.

James H. O'Rourke, Bridgeport, holds a long record for continuous service in Base Ball, viz.: Middletown, Conn., 1872; National League, 1873; played in major leagues for twenty years, and in Connecticut League until 1911.

NOTES.

September 10, 1917. Toronto-Montreal game (12 innings), at Montreal, 6 home runs were made in one inning, 8 in the game.

17 runs in one inning—Newark vs. Hartford, Oct. 1, 1886.

With the score tied, 0—0, at the end of the ninth inning, Little Rock scored 10 runs in the tenth against Birmingham, May 15, 1918.

San Antonio scored 12 runs in the first inning against Shreveport, May 21, 1918. Jack Enright, pitcher, gave 7 bases on balls, hit a batsman, made a wild pitch and allowed 3 hits. Final score, 24—4.

John Bates, Mobile vs. Chattanooga, June 20, 1918, walked five times—every time up. Sacramento scored 15 runs in the seventh inning against Salt Lake City, July 7, 1918, Sacramento winning, 23—5.

Pitcher Wachtel, Fort Worth vs. Dallas, pitched a no-hit game on May 18, 1918.

Jersey City defeated Buffalo, 3—2, in 19 innings, July 27, 1918.

Three close games were played in the Texas League on May 8, 1918. Fort Worth and Shreveport battled 20 innings and tied at 1—1; Houston defeated San Antonio, 4—0; and Dallas won from Waco, 1—0.

September 17, 1902, Miller J. Huggins, playing second base for St. Paul against Louisville, had 11 putouts, 8 assists and no errors in a nine-inning game. This record of 19 total chances is better than the major league record of F. Dunlap, Cleveland, L., who had 18 chances in a game, July 24, 1882.

Salt Lake vs. Los Angeles, Aug. 5, 1917, made 12 runs in the third inning.

June 21, 1917, Ray McKee, San Francisco, stole third with the bases full and got away with it. He was safe and runner on third scored when the umpire called a balk on pitcher T. Hughes of Salt Lake.

Ray Byrd, pitcher Johnson City, Appalachian League, claims to have broken all minor league pitching records for consecutive scoreless innings, by holding opponents blank for 46 2-3 innings.

Edward Wurm, pitcher Jersey City, International League, playing in the outfield in double-header, Sept. 3, against Syracuse, received 7 consecutive bases on balls.

William Conroy, first baseman, Minneapolis, American Association, was at bat 562 times and struck out but 4 times. This appears to be a record. It was his first year as a regular in the Association. He is right-handed and a free swinger.

NOTEWORTHY PITCHING.

On Wednesday, May 26, 1920, Baltimore vs. Reading, at Baltimore, seven balls were pitched to seven batters, six of whom were retired in an inning (two consecutive half innings, rather), as follows: Fifth inning, Baltimore batting against Justin—olden doubled to left on the first pitch; Boley hit to Justin on the first pitch and olden was doubled with him, Justin to Marriott to Sheridan to Brower; Bishop flied to Altenberg on the first pitch. Sixth inning, Reading batting against Frank—Konick singled to center on the first pitch; Justin forced Konnick, Bishop to Boley, on the first pitch; Burns flied to Holden on the first pitch.

Memphis won the pennant in the Southern Association, winning 104 games, the best record in the Southern Association.

Wichita won the pennant in the Western League with 106 victories, the last 19 being in succession.

Base Ball Condensed Data

- 1839—Base ball originated in the United States.
First scheme for playing it devised by Abner Doubleday at Coopers-town, N. Y.
Dimension of the diamond (or "square" as originally called) has not been changed to date.
- 1845—First base ball club organization. The Knickerbocker Base Ball Club of New York.
First rules compiled.
A club to be declared the winner had to score 21 aces (runs) without regard to number of hands (innings), but each side must play an equal number of hands (innings).
Ball used in 1845 weighed three ounces.
Home plate was made of iron plate, flat and circular, to cover a space equal to one square foot.
Pitching distance 45 feet.
- 1846—First match game of record played at Hoboken, N. J., June 19; Knickerbockers vs. New Yorkers, score 23 to 1, in four "hands," or innings.
- 1848—The adoption of playing rule that "a player running to first base was out if the ball was held by adversary on that base before runner reached it," has been in force ever since.
- 1849—Base ball uniform—Knickerbocker Club, New York, adopted a playing uniform, blue and white.
- 1851—Second match game of record played between the Knickerbockers and Washingtons, at Harlem, N. Y., June 3, score: Knickerbockers 22, Washingtons 20, in 8 "hands" (innings).
First extra innings game in base ball occurred with the playing of game, June 17, Knickerbockers vs. Washingtons, 22 to 20, thirty put-outs or 10 "hands" (innings).
- 1854—Ball had to weigh from $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ ounces and was to be $2\frac{3}{4}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches in diameter.
- 1857—First base ball association.
Game was divided into 9 innings; previous to this time the side first securing 21 aces (runs) was the victor, regardless of the number of innings. Rule has never been changed.
First official rule book, edited by Henry Chadwick, printed.
- 1858—Rules confined a pitcher with boundary line 12 feet long.
Pitcher could make short run in delivery.
Pitcher had no "called ball" penalty.
"Called" strikes introduced.
Batsman was out when a batted fly ball, foul or fair, was caught on the first bound; base-runner was not required to touch each base in order.
- 1859—No player allowed to play who received money for services.
Catcher standing close behind the batter, first experiment.
- 1862—Union Grounds, Brooklyn, which was opened May 15, was the first base ball enclosure.
- 1863—Bat, up to 1863, had no restriction as to size or model.
Bat rule says, "bat must be of any kind of wood and round and not to exceed $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in the thickest part, no restriction as to length."
Pitcher's box 12 feet by 4 feet.
No step in delivery. Both feet on the ground.
The infield was termed a square, instead of a "diamond."
Home base and pitcher's box were required to be marked with an iron plate painted or enameled white.
No base can be made on a foul ball; base-runners must return to the base and can be put out in the same manner as the striker when running to first base.

A.G. Spalding & Bros.

Official

When you want "the best" in any athletic sport you instinctively think of "Spalding." That is why the leading organizations of the country invariably adopt Spalding equipment.

Spalding "Official National League" Ball

Official ball of the world series. Standard for nearly half a century.

Spalding Official Intercollegiate No. J5 Foot Ball

All of the big college contests are played with the Spalding Official Intercollegiate No. J5 Foot Ball.

Spalding Official No. M Basket Ball

Used in all of the principal intercollegiate and other championships.

Spalding Official "Olympic" Soccer Ball

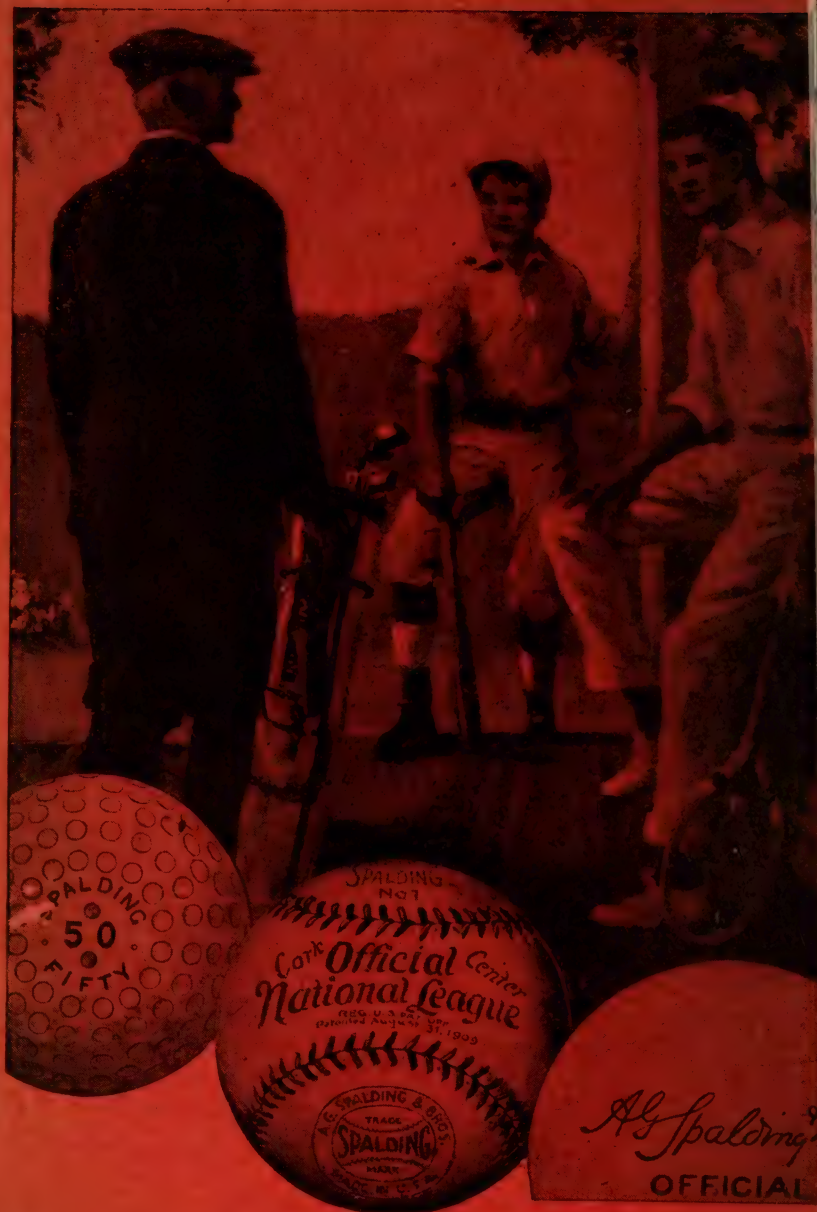

Used by leading soccer leagues in both England and America.

Spalding Official Tennis Ball

Used in the National Clay Court championships and other prominent tennis tournaments.

The American Olympic Team of 1920 was outfitted completely by A. G. Spalding & Bros., as have been all previous American Olympic Teams. When championships are won or records made, Spalding athletic equipment is always in evidence.

If it's Official, it's Spalding

Two Important Books—Just Published

ATHLETIC ALMANAC

THE Spalding Official Athletic Almanac occupies in the arena of track competition the same position that the Record does in baseball. It is the recognized authority on all matters of time or distance in athletic and swimming competitions. Readers know that if it is in "the book" it is correct.

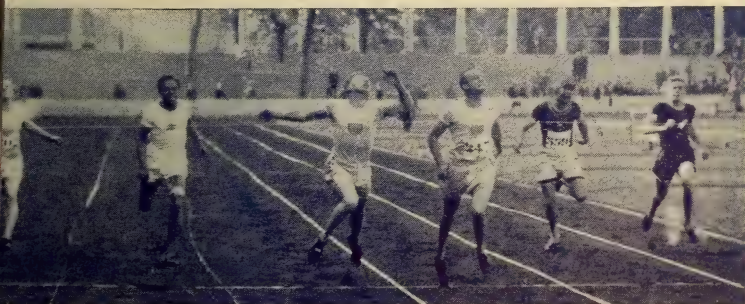

Contents include the latest approved world records, noteworthy performances, national champions in each event since the organization of the A. U.; diagrams showing the gradual improvement in the marks for the standard events for the past quarter of a century; amateur boxing champions and foreign records. A new department comprises the records of all of the intercollegiate associations and conferences, together with pictures of leading college teams and individual champions. Invaluable as a handy book of reference. Price 25 cents

OLYMPIC HANDBOOK

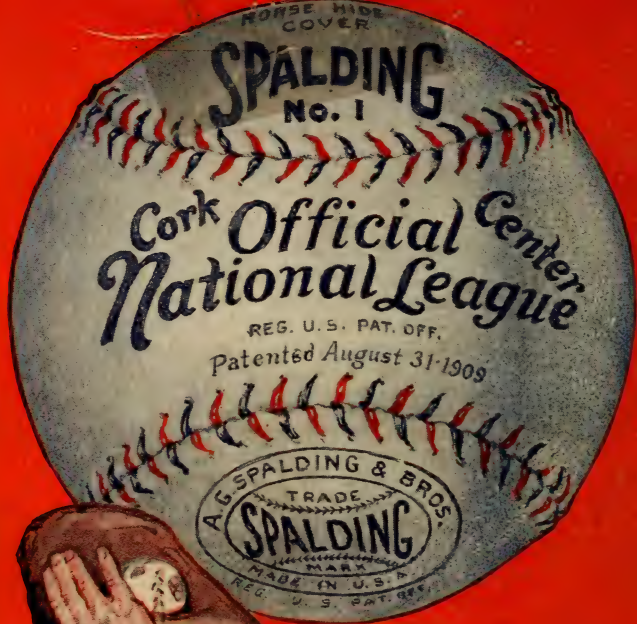

THE only complete record of the Olympic Games of 1920 that has been published. Profusely illustrated. Records of previous Olympic Games and world records. Schedule for the Olympic Games of 1924, to be held at Paris, is included; also athletic rules governing Olympic contests and other important information pertaining to the next Olympiad. Price 25 cents
